No survivors in air tragedy over Yugoslavia

176 killed as airliners collide

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — A British airliner and a Yugoslav charter jet carrying West German tourists collided at 35,000 feet near Zagreb today, officials said. All 176 persons aboard the planes were killed, according to doctors at the scene.

A witness among the first to arrive at the crash site said the body of one plane was burned out. He said bodies and luggage were scattered around the rubble. More than 30 ambulances and fire trucks went to the scene but found no one alive, he said.

The British plane carried a reported 54 passengers and nine crew members. A British Airways spokesman in New York said there was one American and one Canadian aboard the plane. However, British Airways officials in London said there were at least two Americans and some Turkish nationals aboard.

The New York spokesman said it would be 12 to 24 hours before a passenger list was available.

The Yugoslav plane had 108 passengers and five crew members aboard, company officials said. Sources said most or all of them were West German tourists returning from vacations on the Adriatic coast.

The planes collided at 6:15 a.m. EDT about 15 miles northeast of Zagreb, Yugoslavia's second largest city and 230 northwest of Belgrade.

The planes were in an established air corridor over Yugoslavia utilized by all civilian planes, officials said. The corridor is under the control of the Zagreb traffic center.

The cause of the collision was not immediately known. Officials said an investigation was begun.

British Airways officials in London said Flight 476 was on a direct flight from London to Istanbul. The officials said the plane was a Trident 3 jetliner.

Reports here said the Yugoslavian plane was a DC9 belonging to the Yugoslav charter company Inex-Adria. The DC9 was flying between Split, Yugoslavia, and Cologne, West Germany.

In Cologne, officials said the Yugoslavian plane had been chartered by Kaufhof, a Cologne-based tourist agency.

The crash was the worst collision since July 1971, when an All-Nippon Airways Boeing 727 collided with a Japanese air force F86 over Morioka, Japan, killing 84 persons aboard the planes and 71 on the ground.

The most recent American air collision occurred in September 1969. Eighty-three persons died when an Allegheny Airlines DC9 hit a student pilot's plane at Shelbyville, Ind.

A spate of near-misses last year prompted the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration to order the installation of more modern air traffic control equipment and revise procedures for controllers.

The incidents also led the FAA to hasten plans for installing a computerized conflict alert system, which would issue warnings when aircraft within a four-to five-miles sphere came too close.

An FAA spokesman here said the new system was in effect at all of the agency's 20 in-route traffic control centers in the United States by January of this year.

SOVIET PILOT IN L.A.

Lt. Viktor Belenko, the Russian pilot who defected by landing his supersecret MIG 25 fighter plane in Japan, leaves a commercial airliner in Los Angeles Thursday night with U.S. security agents. He is one of the two men dressed nearly alike at center, but officials did not say which one. The two men left the airport in a caravan of police cars.

Capt. Borman denies bribe charge

Implicate ex-astronaut's son in West Point cheat scandal

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite denials, two men convicted in West Point's cheating scandal stand by their sworn allegations that former astronaut Frank Borman's son accepted a $1,200 bribe to "fix" an honor code case while he was a cadet.

The son, Army Capt. Frederick Borman, denied the charge and offered to take a lie detector test to settle the issue.

The two cadets who are accused in the affidavits of having bribed Borman to fix a plebe's case also denied the allegation.

But the two members of the Class of 1977 who signed the statements refused to recant when told of the denials late Thursday.

One of them said he had learned of the incident from two friends who told him they in turn had heard of it from the alleged bribers. The second cadet said the two alleged bribers had boasted of their deed to him and to others in their cadet company.

The elder Borman, now president of Eastern Airlines, said he was anguished by the charges and said it was unfortunate they had been made.

Ironically, Borman, a West Point graduate who was promoted to general after his trip to the moon, is to preside at month's end at the first meeting of a blue-ribbon panel created by Army Secretary Martin R. Hoffmann to analyze the U.S. Military Academy's worst scandal in its 174 years.

"I have no intention of stepping down because I don't think I have a reason to step down," Borman said in a telephone interview.

The disputed affidavits are among those signed by 150 of the 226 cadets involved in the cheating scandal in an effort by defense lawyers to get them reinstated by showing that cheating is endemic at the academy. The affidavits accuse 687 other cadets of honor code violations.

Borman's name — actually the name of a nonexistent "Frank Borman Jr." — appeared on two similarly worded documents.

"Michael Weidner and John Otte each gave $600 to buy off an honor rep," one stated. "They told me that they gave $1,200 to the honor rep to vote not guilty at — —'s honor board in late 1973. The vote of the board was 11 guilty votes to one not-guilty vote. I found out later that Frank Borman Jr. was the honor rep who took the $1,200."

Said Frederick Borman, who graduated in 1974 and is a football coach and scout in West Point's athletic department, "I just want to tell you that everything is false, and I'll take a lie detector test. I wouldn't fix a board for $10 million." He added that he was in the same regiment as the plebe whose case was dismissed and thus couldn't have sat in judgment.

Denying that he had bribed Borman, Air Force Lt. Weidner said, "Someone has one hell of an imagination."

Army Lt. Otte said, "I didn't have $600 as a cadet to give. Neither did Michael Weidner."

Gov. Brown's school bill veto spurs hot attack from Riles

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. has vetoed the year's major school bill, a "personalized learning" plan for junior and senior high schools, saying it would cost too much.

The action Thursday drew a scathing attack by state schools chief Wilson Riles, who had made the bill his top priority.

"He has obviously abandoned his previous rhetoric calling for educational reform and has aligned himself with the status quo," Riles said in his strongest criticism of Brown to date.

But the Democratic governor said schools could accomplish most of the changes in the multimillion-dollar bill without cost "if there is the will to bring them about."

He also said it was unwise for the state to begin a costly new program while the Serrano court decision, which could require the state to spend large sums to equalize school district finances, is still pending.

At the same time, Brown signed a measure by Assemblyman Gary Hart, D Santa Barbara, requiring high school students in June 1980 to pass tests in reading, writing and arithmetic, and possibly other subjects, to get a diploma.

The governor said this measure is a less expensive way, at $399,000, to accomplish one of the stated goals of the vetoed bill — making sure students learn basic skills.

In another area, Brown signed a bill by Assemblyman Barry Keene, D Eureka, requiring state Health Department approval before new hospital construction, expansion or major equipment purchases.

The vetoed bill, by Sen. John Dunlap, D-Napa, was the product of a 37-member statewide commission for the Reform of Intermediate and Secondary Education (RISE).

It would have given each junior and senior high school student an individual learning plan that could have included work internships, community projects, and even one-year "furloughs" from school.

Course credit would have been awarded for the work projects and demonstrated skills on tests rather than "seat-time" in class.

Each school would have had a planning council of students, parents, teachers, administrators and community leaders. Teacher aides would have been hired to make some classes smaller.

It would have cost $3.6 million in the first year of planning, and much more when fully implemented in seven years — $141 million by Riles' estimate.

Russian pilot in L.A.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The security-shrouded flight to the United States of a Russian air force pilot who defected may have included a possible appearance change over the Pacific Ocean.

Lt. Viktor I. Belenko, the Soviet pilot who defected Monday by landing his MIG25 in Japan, boarded a Northwest Orient Airlines 747 jetliner in secrecy in Tokyo and was immediately ushered upstairs to the firstclass lounge, which was guarded. Passengers were denied use of the facility.

The plane refeuled in Honolulu. Belenko did not deplane. The plane landed here Thursday night and the 29-year-old Soviet flyer was whisked away by government officials in a motorcade.

Defense and State Department officials met for an hour with airport authorities just before the plane arrived, apparently planning Belenko's next step. But they declined to say where they would take the pilot of one of the world's swiftest airplanes.

A photograph of Belenko taken as he boarded the plane in Tokyo showed a man with what appeared to be short hair wearing a pinstriped suit, a dark tie with a white knot and sunglasses.

When the 747 landed in Los Angeles, a man with long sideburns was wearing the pinstriped suit and tie with the white knot. A second man was wearing a dark suit and sunglasses.

Officials of the State and Defense departments were unavailable for comment on just where Belenko was late Thursday night.

Belenko, seeking asylum in the United States, got into a waiting Los Angeles Police Department car which sped away in a caravan. He was believed headed for Washington — eventually. But authorities refused to discuss the matter.

Belenko's defection produced a new diplomatic chess match between the Soviet Union and Japan. The Soviets demanded that the plane and Belenko be returned. Meanwhile, Western intelligence experts began the rare treat of a close look at the plane which can fly faster than 2,100 miles per hour.

Belenko at first would not meet with Soviet officials in Japan. He finally agreed to meet with Soviet Embassy representatives in Tokyo just before he left for the United States.

Soviet rocket section lands in Montana

WASHINGTON (AP) — A large rocket section from a Soviet satellite came down in Montana earlier this week, Pentagon sources report.

The rocket body from the Soviet Cosmos 854 has not yet been recovered by U.S. officials, who say it was tracked by radar.

Sources said the descending rocket body probably looked to spectators like a flaming comet as it passed over Washington state, Idaho, and finally fell in Montana, south of the Canadian border.

According to military, sources, debris from Soviet space vehicles drops on the United States from time to time, but usually in small pieces. The rocket section from Cosmos 854 apparently was larger than most that have fallen onto U.S. soil.

There is some question as to how much could be learned from studying the rocket section because it burned as it came down through the atmosphere.

It was tracked by North American Air Defense Command radar which maintains a constant watch on objects approaching the United States.

Ailing Tito cancels all engagements

PARIS (AP) — Yugoslav President Tito, 84, has cancelled his immediate engagements because of illness and a planned visit by French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing Sept. 15 is expected to be postponed, informed sources said here Friday.

An official communique announcing the postponement was expected to be issued in the two capitals later in the day.

The sources did not specify the nature or seriousness of the condition of the veteran Communist leader but said he was canceling engagements "as he has in the past." Yugoslav foreign minister Milos Minic came to Paris today to meet briefly with Giscard d'Estaing and it was announced that he delivered a personal message from Tito.

Minic later met with Foreign Minister Louis de Guirangaud.

Weather

Moderate rain and a few thunderstorms today and Saturday. Humid weather with highs of 85 both days and an overnight low 71. High Thursday 87, overnight low 68. Sunrise Saturday 6:31 a.m., sunset 7:04 p.m.

Showers will continue at least until Sunday

Moderate rain and a few thunderstorms are expected tonight and Saturday after a steady, gentle rain poured more than a third of an inch over most of the valley Thursday night and today.

The weather will remain humid and warm with highs of 85 today and Saturday.

The rainfall was the second in a freakish September week and in the 24 hours ending 8 a.m. today. It ranged from .67 of an inch in Walnut to .10 next door in Diamond Bar.

Skies should begin clearing by Sunday, the National Weather Service says.

The Los Angeles County fire dispatcher reported wire emergencies throughout the area. Numerous short power failures were reported in the West End area of San Bernardino County Thursday night and this morning because of the rain.

West End areas affected included Alta Loma, Cucamonga, Upland and parts of Ontario.

Some phone service was interrupted. Police stations had momentary power outages.

Flash flood alerts covered much of Southern California, including mountains and desert areas.

Hurricane Kathleen, off Baja California, which brought on the rain, was moving 25 miles per hour to the north-northwest early today.

Campers were advised to stay alert for rapidly rising streams.

GREENS REUNITED WITH BABY

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The David Green family of Vancouver, B.C., is back together today, heading home with the 2-week-old son who had been kidnaped at knifepoint four days ago.

Young Cameron Green, wrapped in a blanket his mother had brought from home just for the reunion, yawned and promptly went to sleep as his tearful parents posed for news photographers.

"We were so happy when we found out he was here," said Green as tears streaked his cheeks. "We're not going to lose him again."

Acting on a tip, agents had found the infant in a home in suburban Hayward. Two Hayward women were arrested at separate residences, agents said.

The parents were flown to Oakland and then whisked to the FBI's office in downtown San Francisco where they were reunited with their baby. Green said the family planned to return to Vancouver today.

They refused to say whether they were acquainted with the women who have been charged with the abduction.

Sandra Ann Hanoum, 24, also known as Sandra Ann Gillen, and Rena Marie Conley, 21, were being held in the San Francisco County jail on $500,000 bail each. A preliminary hearing was scheduled for Sept. 17.

Asst. U.S. Atty. F. Steele Langford said Canadian authorities have indicated they will begin extradition proceedings immediately to have the women returned to Canada for trial.

Both the United States and Canada could prosecute the case independently, Langford said, but whether the U.S. would prosecute had not been decided.

The affidavit filed with the criminal complaint said the infant was taken by a woman Mrs. Green saw at the hospital just after the baby was born.

Authorities said a woman posing as a University of British Columbia student conducting a survey gained entry to the Green home. Mrs. Green was bound and gagged and the baby taken hostage, officers said.

FBI agent John Reikes said in the affidavit that Miss Hanoum had the baby in her possession when the arrests were made.

Motive remained a major mystery in the case.

"We frankly don't know what the motive is at this point," said Bates. "There is a lot of speculation."

There were published reports that the infant may have been snatched as part of an elaborate plot to sell him on the black market. Bates refused to discuss the reports.

In Vancouver, Sgt. Amos Hennan of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police said his agency was aware of the report but would not comment until "our investigators have had a chance to talk to these people," referring to the Greens and the women in custody.

Aerialist's death second in circus

FRESNO (AP) — The death of a woman aerialist here was only the second at a Ringling Brothers, Barnum and Bailey Circus performance in 31 years, a spokesman says.

In fact, the death of Brenda Cuttin, 42, may have been only the second in the 106-year history of the circus billed as "The Greatest Show on Earth," said Secretary Jerry Sowalsky.

"I think one in 1945 was the only other fatality ever in a Ringling show," Sowalsky said in a telephone interview from his Washington D.C. office Thursday. "There have been some in other circus acts."

Circus officials were still trying to determine why Mrs. Cuttin fell Wednesday while spinning around a tightrope with a motorcycle rider attached to the other side.

She and cyclist Elvin Bale did not use a net, so she plummeted 40 feet to the concrete floor. Mrs. Cuttin was pronounced dead an hour later at a local hospital.

"You can rule out a malfunction of equipment," said Lloyd Morgan, manager of the Blue Division of the circus which is playing here. "We know it wasn't that."

The motorcycle-trapeze act will be eliminated from the rest of the run which ends here Sunday because "we don't have anyone to replace Brenda Cuttin," Morgan explained.

Mrs. Cuttin had been with Ringling Bros. only a few weeks but had worked with other circuses for about 20 years, spokesmen said. She is survived by her husband, two children and her parents.

$41 million in Yuba City crash suits

YUBA CITY (AP) — The Yuba City Unified School District is the target of 49 claims totaling $41.1 million in connection with the bus crash that claimed 29 lives, an official says.

The 100-day deadline for filing claims following the May 21 Martinez bus crash ran out at the end of last month, district Supt. Andros Karperos said Thursday.

"The legal position of the district is that it hired the bus line, and the bus line is the responsible party," he said in an interview.

The district is insured by United Pacific Insurance, he said.

Anthony Diepenbrock, a Sacramento attorney representing the district, could not be reached immediately for comment.

Mars orbiter photos spectacular

PASADENA (AP) With Viking 2 being prepared for its first life search experiments on Mars, the orbiter tending the now-dormant Viking 1 lander is roaming the planet and making spectacular photographic finds.

A pair of parallel 37-mile-wide canyons, with sheer, steep sides, was photographed Thursday at the west end of Vallis Marineris, the planet's 2,000-mile long chain of gorges.

Geologists said the canyons' origin was probably a pair of faults, or cracks in the crust, which weakened the surrounding land and caused it to crash to the floor of the chasms. The canyons were at least six-tenths of a mile deep.

The Viking 1 orbiter no longer has to spend all its time as a relay station for its lander, since communications between the lander and Earth are at a minimum.

This weekend, mission controllers plan to set the orbiter loose to "walk" around the planet and look for more clues to Martian geologic history.

The Viking 2 lander is just getting underway on its life-detecting mission. On Thursday officials announced that a smooth place had been found for the first collection of dirt by the lander's robot arm.

Early Sunday morning, and again on Monday, the scoop-tipped arm will delve into the soil of Utopia Planitia, the Viking 2 landing site. It will dump the dirt sample into hoppers leading to a complex biology laboratory identical to the one carried by Viking 1.

Other samples will go to the craft's inorganic and organic analysis experiments, which are used in conjunction with biology tests for life search studies as well as other studies of their own.

The automated lander also tested the atmosphere and weather Thursday, as well as listening for marsquakes. Results of those experiments are due to be reported Friday.

CHP goes CB? — 10-4

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California's highway "Smokey" is catching on to the citizen-band radio fad and plans to expand CB use to improve emergency response in rural areas, officials say.

Individual highway patrolmen have been allowed to put their personal CB sets in patrol cars, and CHP Commissioner Glen Craig is pleased with results.

So the CHP — Smokey to truckers in CB jargon — is using a $190,000 federal grant and buying 800 CB sets with plans to have them installed in as many patrol cars by next April, CHP spokesman Kent Milton said Thursday.

The projects stems from a request last year by nine CHP officers stationed in the Barstow area to use their own CB sets on the job, Milton said.

Permission was granted and the patrol kept records for about a year.

"From CBers on the road, there were 36 reports of drunken drivers and our officers actually went out and stopped 35 of them," Milton said.

"Most resulted in drunken driving arrests. So it resulted in three dozen arrests that wouldn't have been reported any other way."

Milton said that other patrolmen in the state have received permission to use their own CB sets on the job, such as the "Black Knight" officer who works out of Yreka.

The CHP has 1,900 patrol cars, and the CB-equipped cars will be on heavily traveled, rural routes such as Interstate 5 between Los Angeles and Stockton.

The sets will have 23 channels, including an override channel so persons in distress can break in and report emergencies, Milton said.

"Until this year, 90 per cent of the CB radios were used by truckers — two ways," Milton said.

"We know they use them to identify CHP cars — 'Hey, Smokey is at such and such turnoff' — but they also use them to advise us of accidents that have not been reported, identify drunken drivers and road hazards.

"On balance, we think they are helpful."

Stories of CB assistance to law enforcement are numerous and varied.

For example, there's the case of two truckers who listened last month as a dozen state and local patrol cars pursued an allegedly stolen pickup truck 100 miles from Medford, Ore., to Shasta County.

Several times patrol cars pulled ahead of the pickup and tried to slow it down, only to be rammed in the rear.

Finally, truckers hogged both lanes of Interstate 5 freeway near Shotgun Creek and slowed down, trapping the pickup as the law caught up.

Prop. 14 is politicos' dilemma

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Rural Democratic legislators who face election difficulties this fall are increasingly coming out against Prop. 14, the farm labor ballot initiative.

By Thursday, such opponents of Prop. 14 included Assemblymen John Garamendi and Tom Suitt, Assembly candidates Richard Lehman and Betty Smith, and Senate hopeful Rose Ann Vuich.

Most Republican leaders and all of the opponents of farm area Democrats have also come out against Prop. 14 or are expected to do so.

Among Democratic leaders, however, the initiative has been endorsed by Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., Sens. John Tunney and Alan Cranston, and Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley.

The measure is sponsored by Cesar Chavez' United Farm Workers union. It would make some pro-labor changes in the state's landmark farm labor union representation elections law, and prohibit amendments without a new public vote.

The UFW launched the initiative campaign this spring when funding for the farm labor board was blocked by rural legislators.

Assembly Democrats, including Garamendi and Suitt, finally voted to restore funding, giving their Republican opponents a potential campaign issue. The Democrats are now apparently trying to soften that issue by opposing Prop. 14.

The strike front: buses, taxis and frozen food

RTD

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Board members of the Southern California Rapid Transit District are expected to meet Monday to discuss a 19-day-old bus strike, but there is no indication they will move from their "final offer" stance, a spokesman says.

The board members came under attack Thursday when Earl Clark, president of the bus drivers' United Transportation Union, called for their resignation or removal.

He said the board has proven unconcerned about effects of the strike on the public, particularly the poor and elderly who depend on public transit.

Meanwhile, Walt Thompson, an RTD spokesman, said a telephoned bomb threat is being taken seriously by the district and the police.

He said a man speaking with an accent and identifying himself as a member of the leftist New World Liberation Front called a radio station and the district, saying that a bomb would be planted and directors would be harmed if the strike did not end Thursday.

Thompson said precautions were being taken, but declined to elaborate.

S.F. taxis

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Yellow Cab's 500 San Francisco taxis have been stalled by a strike of 11 garage servicemen, members of Teamsters Union Local 665.

The strike, blasted as "insane" by the company, started Thursday and tied up all cabs behind picket lines at the Yellow Cab service yard at Eighth and Townsend streets.

No talks have been scheduled in the wage dispute, bad news for the locally dominant taxi company, but a windfall for their independent competitors.

"We're swamped," said a spokesman at DeSoto Cab Co. "We can't handle our regular customers."

School bus

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — As youngsters returned to classes today after a state holiday, negotiations continued in the strike by 190 bus drivers who transport 19,000 children to public elementary schools daily.

Federal mediator Robert Crall said the talks at a downtown hotel had shown "positive results" in such non-economic areas as scheduling.

However, he said, no progress had been made on the major snafu standing in the way of a settlement — wages.

The negotiations are being conducted sporadically with both sides talking for several hours and then taking extended breaks for private strategy sessions, Crall said.

Frozen food

SALINAS (AP) — Strikers were scheduled to finish voting today on a proposed agreement to end a walkout against frozen food processing plants in Salinas, Modesto, Patterson and Santa Maria.

Four thousand Teamsters began balloting after negotiators reached a tentative settlement early Thursday.

The walkout was the second major harvest-time strike in California food processing industries this summer. The Teamsters struck the canneries in July, causing heavy losses of cling peaches, pears, apricots and tomatoes.

Terms of the frozen food agreement were not revealed, but they were believed to be similar to ones obtained by the Teamsters earlier this week in separate negotiations with Watsonville area plants.

That settlement provided boosts of $1.10 to $1.55 an hour over three years, putting the wage range at $4.72 to $7.35 an hour at the end of the contract.

Lawrence Porter, president of the Lima Bean Growers Association, said the strike had cost growers in the King City area $195,000.

Threat

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Food Employers Council and 19 Teamsters Union locals are engaged in a last-ditch effort to head off a strike by 10,000 drivers and warehousemen in Southern California and Nevada.

Negotiators for both sides went into closed-door talks Thursday.

The union's contract expired Sunday and members are expected to vote on strike authority next weekend. The contract covers teamsters in Las Vegas and California from San Luis Obispo to the Mexican border.

Extension of tax cuts may get final OK soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The big tax bill that continues existing income tax cuts is expected to win final congressional approval next week and then be signed by President Ford.

Senate-House tax negotiators settled on final terms Thursday night on the bill containing a sweeping assortment of tax cuts and tax hikes and touching on a wide variety of human affairs from child care to death.

For the average American taxpayer, the bill would continue current $15-billion-a-year tax cuts through next year, worth $180 to a typical family of four making $15,000 annually.

Depending on each individual's tax circumstances, there are special features such as aid to the elderly and pensions for housewives. For firms and investors, the bill's territory extends from capital gains and losses to new curbs on tax shelters.

The top two tax-writing Democrats in Congress — Rep. Al Ullman of Oregon and Sen. Russell B. Long of Louisiana — claimed after the compromise sessions that their product is a major legislative initiative and voiced confidence that Ford will sign it.

Some items in the bill reach internationally. For instance, U.S. firms participating in the Arab boycott of Israel and Jewish businessmen could lose millions of dollars in tax benefits.

There also would be simplification of tax tables for that familiar Form 1040.

From the standpoint of the federal budget, the compromise package of tax revisions will gain for the government $1.6 billion in the budget year beginning next month, thus meeting major revenue-raising goals.

That's bad news for those taxpayers who will pay the extra money. These generally are wealthier persons who will feel, for example, a $1-billion-a-year sharper bite from the so-called minimum tax on the rich.

However, some of America's wealthiest families will benefit most from the proposed comprehensive overhaul of tax law covering major gifts during life and estates at death.

The changes would exempt from inheritance taxes all but the wealthiest 2 per cent of U.S. estates — meaning, for practical purposes, no estate worth under $525,000 would pay this federal levy. About 7 per cent pay estate taxes under present law.

By 1981, the Treasury's annual revenue loss would run $1.4 billion. However, by then, another feature of the package, hiking income taxes of heirs who sell inherited property, would be gaining $162 million.

16 named in police sex scandal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sixteen police officers face disciplinary action or criminal charges over allegations of having sex with teen-age girls in a police Explorer Scout program.

Deputy Police Chief Darryl Gates said Thursday the unidentified officers — 15 patrolmen and one sergeant — met after hours with six of the girls at the police Hollywood Division headquarters. The girls ranged in age from 16 to 19.

"The department is outraged," Gates told newsmen.

He added: "We don't have any outraged parents, which is kind of disappointing, I guess, (and) we don't have any outraged young people."

Gates did say the parents of girls possibly involved were "outraged that the department was seeking to investigate and would not talk to us or allow their children to talk to us."

An investigation of the sex incident was begun last month by the police department's Internal Affairs Division as a result of persistent rumors circulating at the department. Details of the sexual encounters, all of which reportedly occurred more than one year ago, were not made public.

Indian Airlines 737 hijacked

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — An Indian Airlines Boeing 737 was hijacked on a domestic flight over India early today and forced to land at Lahore, Pakistan, authorities said.

Sources in Pakistan and the Indian capital of New Delhi said six of the 77 passengers aboard were released because they became ill. They were a West German woman, her husband and child and three Indians, the sources said.

Officials denied earlier reports that all the passengers had been released. The plane carried seven crew members, officials said.

An airline spokesman said no Americans were known to be aboard the plane. He said the German family was part of a 15-person German tour group.

The hijackers demanded to go to Saudi Arabia, sources said. However, there was no indication of their nationality. Officials made no immediate response to the demands.

The plane was hijacked shortly after taking off from Palam International Airport here at 7 a.m. — 9:30 p.m. Thursday EDT — en route to Bombay, with stops scheduled in the Indian cities of Jaipur and Aurangabad.

New Delhi flight control said it lost radio contact with the plane and no further word was received until it landed in Lahore about an hour later.

The last hijacking to Pakistan of an Indian Airlines flight occurred in 1971 when two Kashmiris forced a Fokker Friendship plane on a domestic flight to fly to Lahore. All the passengers were released but the plane was later blown up.

Two months ago, after a five-year hiatus stemming from the 1971 war over Bangladesh, India and Pakistan completed restoration of full diplomatic relations and resumed flights over each other's territory.

Upland man catches burglars red-handed

Two men were booked in the West End Jail this morning on burglary charges after they were captured by an UPLAND man who returned home from vacation Thursday to find his home burglarized.

Arrested by Upland police were Gary Don Donnell, 19, of 8595 Calaveras St., Cucamonga and Roy Kenneth Robinson, 18, of 1444 E. 14th St., Upland.

Police said that homeowner Lon Tubbs and his wife came home at 1740 N. Second Ave. to find the lights on. Tubbs ran into his front yard in time to see two men exit the house and jump into a pickup truck. Tubbs managed to grab the two men and hold them while his wife called police.

Police said they found that the Tubbs home had been entered by burglars who broke a back window. A silver tea service and costume jewelry taken from the Tubbs home were found in the suspect's pickup truck.

Service station robbed

Two young men, one with a pistol and the other a knife, robbed the Economy service station at 362 N. Azusa Ave. VALINDA, Thursday afternoon.

Employe Jonathan Taylor said the pair entered the station office, pulled the weapons and demanded money. After getting it, they fled on foot across Temple Street. They were described as white in their early 20s.

Bus depot robbed

Two young men, one armed with an automatic pistol, robbed the Greyhound Bus Co. at 888 S. Indian Hill Blvd. in CLAREMONT Wednesday night.

Agent Gary Augusta, 27, said the pair entered, asked for information and then one pulled the pistol and looted the cash drawer.

The armed man was described as black, 25 years old, 5 feet 6 and of medium build. He wore a Budweiser visor cap, black shirt and dark trousers.

Another one robbed

A lone gunman wearing a knit scarf over his face robbed the Economy Self Service station at 1054 W. Mission Blvd. in ONTARIO of a small amount of cash Thursday night.

Service station attendant George W. Hawkins, 20, told officers that a man wearing a white knit scarf over his face walked into the station with a small hand gun. The gunman told Hawkins, "I want you to give me all your money."

Police said Hawkins complied and handed over a small amount of cash from his pockets. The gunman fled.

The gunman was described as a black, short, wearing a white and green football shirt. The nickel-plated revolver used by the gunman had a two-inch barrel.

Chino man robbed

A Chino man cleaning the back seat of his car in the Fed Mart parking lot at 1333 N. Mountain Ave. in ONTARIO was robbed of a small amount of cash by a gunman Thursday night police reported.

Wayne G. Bonner, 26, told officers that he was leaning over the back seat of his car in the parking lot when he felt a round object being pushed in his back and a man's voice say, "Give me your money and don't look back." Bonner reached in his pants pocket and handed the gunman his wallet.

The gunman then told Bonner to lie down in the back seat and count to 25. Bonner complied and the robber fled.

Bonner was unable to give police any description of the robber except that he talked with a Latin accent.

Two arrested in holdups

Two men were arrested late Thursday night by POMONA police and accused of an earlier market holdup and the robbery of two victims at Wilson Street and Hamilton Boulevard.

The suspects, Alfred Donahue Pendleton, 27, of Los Angeles, and Willie Dee Hilson, 28, of Pomona, were arrested near Reservoir Street and Mission Boulevard by police who said their car matched the description of the car used in the holdups. Inside the car officers said they found loot taken in the robberies.

The victims of the first robbery were Leonard Simons and Michael Ramsey who were robbed of their jewelry, watches and a small amount of cash. The second holdup was at the 7-Eleven Store at 1001 E. Grand Ave. where employe Tongkuk Kim surrendered a small amount of cash.

It's Ford's turn to discuss abortion views

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

Roman Catholic leaders met with President Ford today, as they had earlier with Jimmy Carter, to discuss an issue catapulted to prominence in the presidential campaign: abortion.

With both men opposed to a constitutional amendment banning abortions, the President's task was to persuade the Catholics that he is more in tune with their views than Carter.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Thursday that Ford does not want a proposed constitutional amendment banning abortion but favors an amendment letting each state set its own policy on abortions.

Carter has been dogged by the abortion issue during his first week on the fall campaign trail. He does not want a constitutional amendment, although he says he is personally opposed to abortions and to using federal funds to pay for them through Medicaid.

Ford makes his first campaign sortie next Wednesday to his alma mater, the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor. And both men are deep in preparation for the first of their three debates, in Philadelphia on Sept. 23.

Who's next in line as China's chairman?

Possible successors

TOKYO (AP) — Hua Kuofeng. Wang Hung-wen. Chang Chun-chiao. Yeh Chien-ying. Chiang Ching. One of these names may replace that of Mao Tse-tung at the top of the ruling ladder in China.

They are among those mentioned most frequently in speculation about who will be the next party chairman in the People's Republic, but when Mao died Thursday no successor had been named.

The Communist party constitution adopted in 1973 provides that a full session of the Central Committee must choose the chairman, but there has been no indication when such a meeting might be held. There was speculation that some sort of collective would lead China for an extended period while maneuvering for power goes on.

Here are sketches of the five most-mentioned leaders:

Hua Kuo-feng, 57, stood next to Mao as premier and first vice chairman of the Communist party. But he was a surprise compromise choice when he was named premier earlier this year to succeed the late Chou En-lai, and there are questions about the strength of his power base in the struggle between radical and moderate groups.

One of those Hua passed was Wang Hung-wen, the second-ranking party vice chairman known as "the Shanghai whiz kid."

Wang, believed to be only 40, is a onetime Shanghai textile mill worker who was active in the cultural revolution in 1967. He and six other party members at the mill where he then worked were said to have put up the first wall posters in that crisis that wracked China.

Chiang Ching, Mao's widow, stands in contention and has wielded enormous influence as the wife of the chairman and in her own political career. A one-time movie actress, she is Mao's fourth wife and the mother of his two daughters.

Believed to have been born in 1914 in Shantung Province, Chiang Ching is a leader of the radical wing of the party. She rose to prominence in the cultural revolution as an organizer of the Red Guards, who sparked much of the violence at that time. She stood with Mao against the more conservative establishment.

Another member of the Shanghai group considered in the forefront is Vice Premier Chang Chun-chiao, 58. He is believed to have support in the party and the military. As a member of the powerful standing committee of the party Politburo, Chang once was regarded as part of the far-left faction headed by Chiang Ching. More recently, however, he is believed to have moved to a more middle-of-the-road position.

Another person mentioned as possible successor to Mao is Yeh Chien-ying, 77-year-old defense minister. He is considered to have broad strength in China's military groups, and generally is regarded as moderate.

Washington's role

WASHINGTON (AP) — The deaths within the last eight months of China's two strongest proponents of detente with the United States have left analysts here wondering about the durability of Washington's role in China's balance-of-power strategy.

Within hours after the announcement of the death of Chinese leader Mao Tse-tung, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger issued an optimistic statement about the future of U.S. relations with Peking, but he also indicated he has some apprehensions.

At one point, he told reporters on Thursday that it is "extremely difficult" to predict what China will do now, but moments later he said he is "sure that from the Chinese side, the basic lines of policy will continue to be pursued."

Kissinger was one of the chief architects of the move that, in 1971, ended more than two decades of hostility between the two countries. That policy was shaped in cooperation with Mao and Prime Minister Chou En-lai, who died in January.

Kissinger, whose comments appeared to be directed primarily at Peking, emphasized on several occasions that mutual interests are more important than personalities in formulating policy.

Therefore, he said, "the main lines of policy are likely to be continued." He pledged a continued American effort to normalize relations with Peking.

Since that effort began, the two countries have exchanged liaison officers and there has been a substantial increase in trade and frequent cultural and educational exchanges.

Lately, however, there has been little movement toward normalization and there have been reports — disputed by Kissinger — that Peking is growing impatient with the slow process.

Significantly, Kissinger said that although there could be a modification of tactics, China's long-standing rift with the Soviet Union likely will continue.

Other analysts here, however, believe that Mao's death raises the best opportunity in many years for an easing of tensions between Moscow and Peking.

Several months ago, a senior CIA analyst, Roger Glenn Brown, published an article calling on the United States to formally recognize China before Mao's death.

Brown's article, published without prior administration clearance, said that prolonged stagnation in Chinese-U.S. relations "could well contribute to undermining the political power of those individuals and groups within China which are favorably disposed toward Washington, and lead to an increase in the relative power of ... pro-Soviet elements."

At the time, the opinion outlined by Brown was described as a minority view within the administration.

The political arena

Brutocao's employment plan

LOUIS BRUTOCAO, Republican nominee in the 35th Congressional District, believes the most secure and productive jobs available in the United States are those created in the private sector of the economy.

"However, bureaucratic intrusion in the free enterprise system has handcuffed industry, stifling job creation," he added.

Brutocao said the answer to unemployment is not "make work" public jobs programs which put the unemployed on the public payroll. He described these as "band-aid" solutions to deep seated economic problems.

"To resuscitate the economy, we must encourage the creation of permanent positions in the private sector. This could be accomplished by giving independent businesses first, then major companies a one time $3,600 tax credit for each person they hire from the ranks of the unemployed and employ for one year," he said.

Issuing his first position paper on "A Plan for Full Employment," the candidate said this includes proposals to balance the national budget to make more money available for investment in the private sector; steps to curtail bureaucratic interference in the private sector; and a revision of the business tax schedule to encourage expansion and job creation.

Brutocao sharply criticized the Humphrey-Hawkins "full employment" bill. "That scheme would cost $20 to $40 billion a year and would add enormously to the cost of government and the national debt."

The Covina candidate plans to issue other position papers on energy, national health care, crime, and government spending.

Members of the local JIMMY CARTER for President Committee will hold a kick-off meeting Wednesday at the West End Democratic Club, 123 E. Holt Blvd., Ontario.

"We are planning an intensive vote getting campaign at the grass roots level," said Lou Gentile, local club president. The meeting starts at 7:30 p.m.

"There have been many requests from residents volunteering for such efforts. At this meeting, plans will be made for the most effective use of our staff," he added.

Representatives of national and state Carter campaign committees have been invited to attend.

The REPUBLICAN CLUB OF CLAREMONT and the CLAREMONT WOMEN'S CLUB have opened a Republican headquarters at 211 N. Indian Hill Blvd., Claremont.

The office is open Mondays through Fridays between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. The telephone number is 624-2371.

A deputy registrar will be on duty to register persons to vote. The office also has literature on Republican candidates and campaign materials.

CLYDE STEPHENS, Republican nominee in the 65th Assembly District, will hold an official opening of his new campaign headquarters on Saturday.

The office is located at 1584 Village Lane, adjacent to the Sears store in the Pomona Valley Center.

The all-day program will include music, entertainment and refreshments. Stephens will be there to greet visitors.

CHRIS McVITTIE, wife of Assemblyman Bill McVittie, D-65th Dist., will be speaker at the West End Democratic Club program Monday.

A delegate at the recent Democratic National Convention, she will give a report on the convention. The program, starting at 7:30 p.m., will be held at the club headquarters, 124 E. Holt Blvd., Ontario.

Alter Montclair workmen's comp.

Montclair City Council has approved a step to provide a more stable balance for its workmen's compensation fund.

Councilmen accepted City Administrator Lauren Wasserman's recommendation for transfer of $250,000 to a separate workmen's compensation reserve from general reserves.

In recommending the transfer, Wasserman said that under the city's self-insurance program, "funds would be available in the event the city is confronted with a major workers' compensation settlement in some point in the near future."

The administrator described the council action as "significant." He added that it's "a calculated risk, but it's very important to the city. The self-insurance program is a temporary savings, but we have more control and are more involved in workmen's compensation cases. We're watching our money much more carefully than before."

The separate reserve is a "hands off fund for a specific purpose and cannot be used for general fund expenditures or equipment purchase," Wasserman explained.

Mayor Harold Hayes concurred with the staff recommendation, describing Montclair as a small community that can't stand large losses on workmen's compensation claims. "We're on our own and don't have anything else to back up on. We should set up reserves for those losses," Hayes noted.

In other action, the council:

— Adopted an amended program of service for 1976-77 totaling $5,682,709. The amendment showed an increase of approximately $299,992 over the program of service approved June 30, and was caused primarily by increases in refuse collection fees and in the special funds for capital improvement. Wasserman noted that the new figure still represents a balanced budget.

— Set a public hearing on Sept. 20 for the review of the Community Development Act block grant expenditures and programs for 1977-78.

Schools hire two new aides

Two women, one a college assistant professor and another a junior high school teacher from Pasadena, have been hired as administrators in the Pomona Unified School District.

Mrs. Johney Brooks, who holds a Ph D from UCLA and since 1974 had worked as assistant professor at Humboldt State, in Arcata, was hired as director of the Emergency School Aid Act (ESAA) pilot project effective Sept. 8.

She will be paid $24,665 for a 220 working day position and mileage.

Her appointment is pending official notification from the federal government that the district's $1.8 million 1976-77 ESAA application has been approved.

Mrs. Vivian C. Burton, a junior high school teacher in Pasadena since 1971, was hired as assistant principal at Marshall Junior High School. She replaces Eugene P. Bynum who resigned.

Mrs. Burton will be paid $23,394 for her 200 working day position. Her employment became effective Sept. 8.

Mrs. Burton, 30, married and mother of two, began her teaching career in Richmond in 1968. She taught at Ft. Meade, Md., before going to Pasadena in 1971.

She was picked from among 74 candidates for the position at Marshall.

Mrs. Brooks, one of nine interviewed for the pilot project supervisor position, began her career as a science teacher in Compton in 1961. Prior to that she had worked as a analytic chemist at Los Angeles County General Hospital.

The Bee Four: isolation, boredom

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article was written for The Associated Press by two of the Fresno Bee newsmen serving indefinite jail terms for refusing to reveal the source of material from sealed grand jury transcript. They will have completed one week in custody today.

(Written for The Associated Press)

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Life on the farm — especially the Fresno County Industrial Farm — is a different world.

It's different for the reglar inmates who would rather be here in the tranquil San Joaquin Valley countryside than sitting in a stifling jail cell downtown.

And different for the two of us and our managing editor, George F. Gruner, and former city editor, James Bort Jr., who presently serves as the Bee ombudsman. None of us has ever been in custody before.

For the other inmates — all of whom are serving misdemeanor criminal sentences — the farm offers a limited amount of freedom along with an opportunity to serve out their time by keeping busy on work details such as helping in the kitchen, tending irrigation ditches, herding beef cattle, harvesting garden vegetables or mopping floors.

We newsmen, on the other hand, must learn to adapt to a more confining, regimented way of life than we were used to.

What started as something new and perhaps even exciting has now evolved into something quite different as we are settling into the daily routine that comes with being a prisoner at the Fresno County Industrial Farm, about 20 miles southeast of Fresno.

No longer do we wear our civilian clothes. Now we are bedecked in our everyday uniforms of white pants and orange sweatshirts stamped with the words "Trusty-Fresno Jail." Our T-shirts say "Fresno County Prisoner" in large black letters.

The uniforms are worn to set us apart from the blue jeans and pale green shirts worn by the other inmates. But, like them, we wear jail-issue blue denim caps, a far cry from the golf caps and other hats we were used to wearing.

It was a strange experience to be awakened our first night, startled by the unexpected presence of a guard standing over our beds as we tried to sleep and get used to our new home. Routine inmate counts, we were to learn later, are made very two hours.

Meals are taken on metal trays. "Take what you want, but eat what you take," says the sign in the industrial farm mess hall.

Like other prisoners, we look forward to mealtimes and the chance to combat the boredom that is sure to come.

The food is tasty and more than enough for men who are not too active. Correctional officers at the farm are proud of the fact that most prisoners finish their terms several pounds heavier.

It is easy to be lulled into a false sense of well-being in the spacious surroundings of the farm, but we cannot forget that this remains a minimum security detention camp in which we are prisoners.

While there are some similarities to the daily routine in the armed forces, there are many differences between life on the farm and on the outside.

Like the World War II Army camps, lights out comes at 9 p.m. and everyone must be in bed by 11 p.m. A 6 a.m. buzzer sounds reveille over a loudspeaker each day on the grounds.

Because we are civil prisoners, we are required by law to remain separated from the other inmates. Naturally, they are curious about us and we about them. Because communication is our business, and because of human nature, it is difficult not to exchange an occasional word.

The rules say any communication between the inmates and the Bee Four must be by letter. And all letters are subject to review by a correctional officer.

The penalty for using a "kite" (a clandestine note) can be several days added to an inmate's sentence.

Because of our separation from the other inmates, we are limited to a small portion of the grounds unless accompanied by a correctional officer. This means a guard must escort us to meals and to the recreational hall for ping pong, a game of pool or to use the weight lifting equipment.

At first, our exercise consisted of jogging on a sidewalk in front of our 12-foot-by-12-foot room. The area since has been extended to include a grassy patch of ground used on visiting days.

No privileges are granted us that are not given the other prisoners except for the use of a telephone for outgoing calls. This privilege is accorded all civil prisoners at the industrial farm. A typewriter also has been made available to us.

Toothpaste, soap, a razor blade, cigarette papers, smoking and chewing tobacco as well as snuff are issued free to inmates periodically through a commissary. Candy, cigarettes and cigars and other sundry items are available for purchase twice weekly.

Like the other inmates, the brightest spot in our week has been visitors' day on Wednesday evenings and Sunday afternoons for a total of five hours. However, each of us, like the other inmates, is limited to three designated visitors during the entire period of our incarceration.

Right now, we play a waiting game. And only time will tell how long that wait must be.

If you have access to the farm, you can find us behind the large sign which reads: "Off Limits."

State committed to SoCal buses?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The state's top transportation officials say the Brown administration is committed to a Los Angeles-area rapid transit system heavily dependent on buses.

The 315-mile network would rely on high-speed buses, special freeway lanes for buses and car pools, and metering of freeway ramps. It would also include a 15-mile, fixed-rail subway line from North Hollywood to downtown Los Angeles.

Under the plan, half the $1 billion cost of the subway line would be borne directly by the state, with the remainder of the funds coming from federal highway and state gasoline taxes.

Adriana Gianturco, director of the California Department of Transportation, outlined the plan Wednesday at a meeting in the Caltrans Los Angeles headquarters. Donald Burns, head of the state's Business and Tranpsortation Agency, also attended the meeting.

"The state came out shooting today — it means busi ness," a Caltrans official said after the session.

Evidence mounting against police chief

By ED PRATHER
PB Staff Writer

Charges of embezzlement against Pomona Police Chief James W. Richards will be evidenced by eight canceled checks totaling $3,445 and bank records covering Richards' checking and savings accounts, Jefferson County, Colo., authorities revealed.

In an affidavit filed in the county's District Court in Denver, district attorney investigators allege that six of the eight checks were illegally deposited in whole or in part in Richards' personal accounts at the Arvada State Bank or at the Majestic Savings and Loan Association in Arvada. The two other checks were cashed at the bank.

Richards, 43, who was suspended without pay by the Pomona City Council Thursday morning, surrendered himself to the court Thursday afternoon and was immediately freed after posting a $10,000 bond.

Preliminary hearing was set for Sept. 20.

According to the affidavit, the investigation of Richards began Aug. 16, one week after he assumed office in Pomona, when Arvada's new chief, Gary Kailey, discovered an accounting discrepancy in the police finance records.

After conferring with Arvada City Manager Capp Shanks, the two men took their suspicions to the District Attorney's Office.

The discrepancy involved a $500 check donated by the United Methodist Church in Arvada. The money was supposedly deposited in a police training account to be used to pay for a new training film. Kailey, however, discovered that the film had been paid for from another account.

According to the affidavit, these developments followed:

A trace of the check by investigators found that the check, endorsed with the signature "James W. Richards," had been deposited in the Arvada State Bank in Richards' personal checking account.

Two other $500 checks, previously donated by the church, were found to have been cashed for currency at the bank, also with the same endorsement.

As the investigation progressed, five checks issued by the city to Richards for police purposes were found to have been deposited in whole or in part in Richards' personal savings account at Majestic Savings and Loan.

Those checks also bore Richards' endorsement and were in the amounts of $500, $495, $250, $350 and $350, authorities said.

Each of the city checks were apparently issued to Richards upon his request under a special arrangement that allowed the chief to withdraw city funds without stating the purpose for which they were to be used.

This procedure was apparently used to allow the city to account for disbursal of funds and at the same time allow the police to pay informants without making a written record.

Richards' was not available for comment Thursday either on the charges or his suspension.

Capt. Richard Slaght, who served as acting chief prior to Richards' appointment, was appointed by the Pomona City Council to again serve in that capacity pending some further resolution of the charges against Richards.

Hearing set Sept. 20

HOUSE ON WHEELS

Barbara Greenwood Arroyo Kindergarten Bungalow, cut in half and up on wheels, is ready for its move from Arroyo Elementary School grounds in Pomona to its new home at the Casa Primera historical site at McKinley and Park Avenues. the 68-year-old building, the city's original kindergarten house, was to have been moved today at 3 a.m. but the operation was canceled due to the rain. Workmen will try again when the weather clears.

Claraboya blaze burns 25 acres

County firemen worked until midnight to contain a 25-acre brush fire which broke out in the foothills above the Claraboya section of Claremont at 3 p.m. Thursday.

"The rain was certainly welcome, although it started just as the fire was pretty well contained," said Capt. Ronald Gunnette of Station 104 in Claremont.

First to respond to a "smoke in area" call was Station 102 on Sumner Avenue in Claremont. Upon locating the fire, the firemen asked for full brush fire assistance which included 13 engine companies, eight camp crews and three helicopters, including one from the U.S. Forest Service. The approximately 150 firefighters were directed by Asst. Chief Joseph Rotella.

The fire, which did not involve any structures, was in the Johnson Pasture area east of Thompson Creek Reservoir, a part of the mountain range which was not burned over during the extensive forest fire last November.

The La Verne Fire Department stood by at the northern city limits in case the fire should extend further to the east.

Search canyon for missing boy, 17

Sheriff's deputies resumed their search this morning for a 17-year-old Whittier area boy believed to be somewhere in the Heaton Canyon area of San Gabriel Canyon north of Azusa.

Michael A. Mass, has been missing since Tuesday morning when he left for work, his mother, Dee Mass, said.

When she learned that he did not arrive at his job, she filed a missing person report with authorities. Then Thursday she went to the canyon where deputies said she told them her son has often threatened he might take his own life. She found her son's car parked there and reported its discovery.

An aerial and ground search was begun but was discontinued at 7:30 p.m. because of darkness. It was resumed this morning, but without the helicopter because of rain. Twelve sheriff's mountaineers were conducting the search.

School seeks volunteer advisors

The Claremont school board is seeking persons with diverse interests and from throughout the community to serve on a district advisory committee.

The board Tuesday night announced the establishment of such a committee, its functions and the process of member selection.

In making appointments, the board will give consideration to these factors: age, educational perspective, special groups, expertise, ethnics and location and length of residence in the city.

The board stressed that a person could nominate himself, be nominated by others, or be recruited by the board.

The committee will aid the district in assessment of district needs, definition of short-range and long range goals, and evaluation and effectiveness of programs.

It will provide a communication link between parents, community, school and the board.

The committee will be composed of 17 members who will serve three-year terms, with one-third of the terms expiring each year.

Nomination blanks may be obtained by phoning the district office at 624-9041.

Two Diamond Bar youths were injured Thursday when their motorcycle jumped a curb and struck a mailbox and pole before ejecting both riders.

Steven Michael Miranda, 14, 23239 E. Antler St., the driver, and Deborah Ann Rodriguez, 13, 1042 Twin Canyon Road, were both taken to the San Dimas Community Hospital.

Miranda was treated and later released. Miss Rodriguez, however, was admitted.

Kim Owen, swallowed a soda substance found in the kitchen of her hqme at 17752 Nearbank Drive, authorities said.

Her mother, Angela Owen, 29, summoned help and Industry sheriff's Deputy Ted Frazier sped the victim to the hospital while county Fire Department Paramedic Jim Paul administered first aid.

Chamber opens fall season Wednesday

The Upland Chamber of Commerce will open its fall activities with a community mixer on Wednesday at the new First National Bank, 125 S. Mountain Ave., Upland.

Earle Handy will serve as host for the get-acquainted event from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m.

Reservations may be made at the Upland Chamber of Commerce office.

The chamber is now taking space reservations for its annual Upland Fall Flea Market on Oct. 10 at Memorial Park.

Started five years ago as a community project to help organizations and clubs become better acquainted with each other and to raise funds, the market is expected to include 35 to 40 participants.

The spring market attracted approximately 5,000 guests and raised an estimated $20,000 for the benefit of the participants.

A $5 fee is charged for space at the flea market.

Man dozes off, rams expressway rail

A Pomona man apparently fell asleep while driving home from work early Thursday and his car struck a metal guard rail before rolling down a dirt embankment.

Daniel Riordan, 60, 2589 Barjud Ave., was treated at Pomona Valley Community Hospital and later transferred to the County-USC Medical Center with multiple injuries. His condition today was listed as fair.

Riordan, a security guard, was driving south on the Corona Expressway in Pomona and reportedly fell asleep near Ridgeway Avenue, said highway patrolmen.

His car then veered to the right where it struck a metal guard rail, which tore out the engine.

The vehicle continued south about 20 feet where it sideswiped a metal light pole and rolled down the embankment, officers added.

Delay Griswold's motel okay

Claremont Planning Commissioners will give further study to a request for a conditional use permit to allow Griswold's to erect a 97-unit hotel structure north of the Smorgasbord Restaurant off Foothill Boulevard.

Commissioners believe parking is a big problem in connection with the addition to the existing hotel.

Four members present at a meeting Tuesday at the Claremont Library decided to continue action on the request.

By a 3-0 vote with one abstention, the commission approved a conditonal use permit to allow "the danson" restaurant to obtain a general on-sale license for distilled spirits in conjunction with the restaurant at 105-109 Yale Ave.

The commission also continued to its Sept. 21 meeting discussion of prezoning the Piedmont Mesa and Live Oak Canyon areas in Claremont's west area of influence.

The commission approved a conditional use permit to allow a residential unit development of 78 lots on 30 acres at Base Line Road and Bonnie Brae Avenue.

Name 3 West End United Way chairmen

Chairmen of three major divisions for the 1976-77 fund drive of the West End United Way have been announced.

Dick Verrue, district manager for Southern California Edison Co., will head Division A. Joe Aldern, general manager of Safetran Systems Corp., Electronic Division, will direct Division B. Ken Wright, manager-secretary of the Monte Vista County Water District, will lead the drive in Division C.

The appointments were announced by T. Stanley Warburton, general campaign chairman.

Those three divisions are responsible for more than 75 per cent of the funds to be raised by the current campaign.

Each division is subdivided into teams of four or five organizations which compete with each other in an "increase per capita giving by employes" contest.

The employes of the firm in each team which produces the greatest per capita increase in their team will be recognized at the campaign victory luncheon on Nov. 16.

Division A is made up of the 25 largest employers in the West End, including school districts in Ontario, Montclair, Upland and Chino. Also in the division are state institutions and firms employing more than 250 people. The division goal is $225,353.

Division B is made up of 53 firms and organizations who employ between 40 and 249 people. The division includes banking institutions, large retail stores, manufacturing firms, California Air National Guard, hospitals and a variety of other firms and organizations. The goal for this division is $130,282.

Division C is comprised of some 51 firms which employ up to 49 persons such as water districts, savings and loans, independent banks, small industrial firms, engineer and architectural and accounting firms. The goal for the division is $31,933.

The kick-off luncheon of the West End United Way's drive is set for noon on Sept. 21 at the Ontario Elks Club. The overall campaign goal is $576,550.

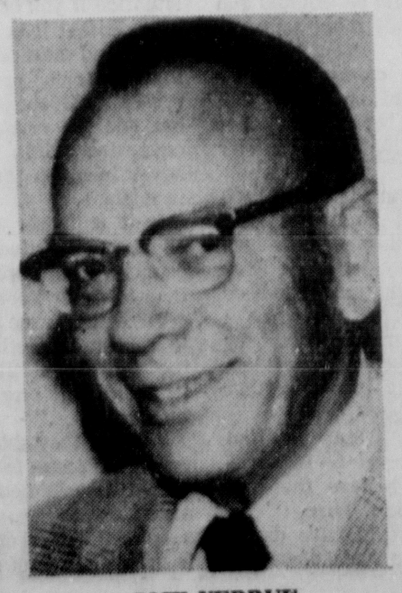

Luncheon reservations may be made by calling the United Way office at 984-1797.

Affirmative action test

Reverse discrimination as practiced by the State of California is on trial in a San Francisco Superior Court. In what is believed to be the first far reaching challenge to the state's so-called "affirmative action" program, the California Correctional Officers Association has brought a class action suit against the Department of Corrections.

The suit charges that male Caucasians have been deprived of employment and promotion because of their racial origins and sex. The rationale for the discrimination, the complaint declares, is the "Affirmative action program designed to achieve a racial composition of employes of the department equivalent to that of the inmate population and a sexual composition equal to the percentage of females in the California labor force."

Although the association feels that the discriminatory practices will be halted by Judge Byron Arnold granting injunctive relief, the case undoubtedly is headed for the State Supreme Court and may even go the U.S. Supreme Court. And while other reverse discrimination suits involving college admissions have reached federal courts, this is reportedly the first major employment case testing affirmative action.

Even though it is brought against only one department the results are expected to affect all state hiring. For, if Judge Arnold does grant the declaratory judgment asked, all other state agencies will be compelled to take heed or face a flood of similar actions.

This because it is well known that the pressure upon the State Personnel Board for greater employment of minorities and females has resulted in a general debilitation of state civil service, with blacks, Mexicans and females being given preference for jobs and promotion, and a lowering of civil service standards. In many cases the written competitive examinations have been eliminated to further the hiring of minorities otherwise unable to meet eligibility requirements. Tests have consisted merely of interviews where no rigid criteria for competitive measurements exist. The decisions are subjective and difficult to challenge. The same practices have been used in establishing promotional lists.

While the suit specifically names two employes as complainants it was brought on behalf "of all persons who have been adversely affected by unlawful employment practices".

It cites the state constitutional provision that "a citizen or class of citizens may not be granted privileges . . . not granted on the same terms to all citizens". It also points to the Labor Code section 1420 which makes it unlawful for any employer to refuse to hire or to discriminate against any person in terms of conditions or compensation because of "race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical handicap, medical condition, or sex."

If the California law is not clear enough the suit pleads the "equal rights" clause of the Fourteenth Amendment as well as the federal civil rights laws.

Stating the case poses the question of whether or not reverse discrimination in favor of minorities complies with state and federal laws, the plaintiffs argue that the Constitution is "color-blind" and that the department is following a doctrine of "two wrongs make a right by discriminating against certain races or against the male sex because of an imbalance in the department's employment force."

This is not an attempt to throw out every affirmative action program," said Ronald E. Yank, attorney for the association. "We're not opposed to aggressive recruitment and equal chances for everyone. Indeed, equal chance is what this case is all about."

Think on these things

The skeptic is one who questions, thinks and habitually doubts everything generally accepted. Often there is even a rebellious sort of pride in constantly calling attention to the uncertainty of all truth. His ability to deflate someone else's effort to be positive only serves to exploit his own pride in being a pessimist.

But there comes a time when everyone must believe in something. We must depend on something to sustain us. All the negative words and lack of faith loom larger than life and have no comfort. Expecting nothing good in hopes of being disappointed is not the answer — only acceptance by some degree of faith, regardless of how small, will help the skeptic.

Haven't we all hated those sluggish hours of lethargy when it seemed an effort to do anything at all? More food, more drink, more rest makes no difference whatever and the sitting and the leaning gets heavier and heavier.

Lethargy is a form of hypnotism. It holds us inert like some slumbering bear in the middle of winter. Yet, it isn't our bodies that have gone to sleep, but our minds. We let go to apathy until we are beyond expression. It is a dull, vacant feeling that will dissolve into nothingness when we interest ourselves in even the smallest project. The mind takes off the chains so the body can escape and get back to normal action.

Reopen library on Saturdays

Dear Editor:

I am fully aware of the monetary problems facing the city of Pomona as it is for all. However, I do feel that it is tragic that our public library must be closed on Saturdays. I could understand cutting out the bookmobile, Sunday hours and Friday nights — regrettable as it is. However, closing Saturday is making it impossible for many to use our fine facility, since this is their one day of leisure.

I do not know if this policy was determined by the City Council or the Library Board. Whoever is responsible should, I think take another look at the picture. Couldn't more volunteer help be solicited to keep up the staff? Or, if they must close one day, why not one week day instead of Saturday. Next to closing churches on Sunday, closing the library on Saturday seems totally wrong. I hate seeing us progress — backwards!

Use patriotic songs

Dear Editor:

If our world crises is as pernicious as the papers, television and radio proclaim they are, then I think we as "One Nation Under God" can utilize our patriotic songs more.

If we half-learned the songs as children and still loved and felt meaning connected with them, well what more so will it be if continued through the media and not just at sports events!

Agnew a foreign agent?

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department is examining Spiro Agnew's pro-Arab, anti-Israeli activities to determine whether he must register as a foreign agent.

The former vice president heads a curious tax-exempt foundation called "Education for Democracy." Its July newsletter reads like a reprint from an Arab propagandist's tearsheet. At the same time, Agnew has become a middleman for deals between U.S. firms and Arab governments.

What the Justice Department wants to know is whether his foundation, newsletter or business deals receive any direction from foreign governments. This would be a violation of the criminal code.

For under the Foreign Agents Registration Act, anyone under the direction of another government, even in small matters, must register as a foreign agent. Agnew is not registered.

As we reported in an earlier column, the money behind Agnew's foundation doesn't come from Arab sources. He solicited contributions from such disparate friends as ex-presidential contender Ronald Reagan, convicted Watergate figure Maurice Stans, actor John Wayne, brewer Joseph Coors, lobbyist Bryce Harlow and Sen. Strom Thurmond, D.-S.C.

Agnew even kicked in a $20,000 contribution of his own to the foundation. But this only increases the curiosity of the Justice Department lawyers. They wonder, for example, where he got the $20,000. Did it come indirectly from Arab sources?

They also want to know whether he publishes Arab propaganda in return for business deals. If there are any hidden Arab contributions or quid pro quos, Agnew could be in violation of the law.

It isn't likely that Agnew would be prosecuted for his activities, although violators can be sent to prison. The penalty probably would be no more than an order to register forthwith as an 'agent for Arab clients.

But the registration would open his files for inspection. He would be required to report personal and financial data. And since he was forced out of the vice presidency, Spiro Agnew has been extremely secretive about who is paying him.

Footnote: Agnew did not return our calls. His legal advisors insist, however, that he is not required to register under the act.

WATCH ON WASTE: The top brass at the Federal Energy Administration have issued solemn directives, calling not only for energy savings but fiscal savings.

The FEA administrators refused, for example, to allow Gerry Jackson, a mid-level bureaucrat, to spend $185 for a train trip to Philadelphia. He wanted to speak to a black conference about job opportunities for minorities in the energy field.

But when the top brass want to travel, it's a different story. Administrator Frank Zarb's executive assistant, David G. Hanes, was eager to attend the Republican convention in Kansas City last month. Somehow, the FEA found the money to fly Hanes to the Republican shindig, first class.

Hanes had nothing to do in Kansas City but watch over Zarb's tennis equipment. But nonetheless, he collected $50 a day for expenses. He also charged the taxpayers for sending three suits to the hotel cleaners.

The FEA just spent $12,000, meanwhile, to construct a new Washington conference room suitable for the deliberation of the big brass. But the 10 regional administrators gathered to deliberate not in the new conference room but across the country in a fancy hotel on Orcas Island in the middle of Puget Sound.

During their deliberations, plenty of free time was set aside for golf, tennis and swimming. The FEA, despite its economy kick, dug up enough money to pay the bills.

The new conference room was authorized by Gorman Smith, an assistant FEA administrator, who also forsook the new quarters to deliberate in the West. He flew, with three associates, to Alaska to discuss an important subject: the price the government intends to set on Alaskan oil.

Smith and his companions were met at the airport by a friendly oil retail association man, who has a personal stake in the price of Alaskan oil. The oilman chartered a floatplane and whisked the FEA officials off to Crescent Lake, where they all fished for grayling.

Still another FEA official, budget chief Martin D. Howell, showed up in Alaska last month, ostensibly to conduct an audit review of the small FEA office there. Such reviews normally take no more than three or four days. But Howell, a hunting and fishing enthusiast, managed to stretch it to two weeks.

It is Howell, of course, who keeps a tight pursestring on the travel of the lesser lights at FEA.

Footnote: Hanes told us he attended the GOP convention to assist his boss, Zarb, and to "watch out for FEA matters." He denied flying first class. We don't know which end of the plane he rode in, but his travel orders called for first-class fare. FEA spokesmen defended the regional conference on Orcas Island as necessary. Howell was still in Alaska and couldn't be reached.

BELLOWING BELLA: We found out last week why Rep. Bella Abzug, D.-N.Y., is called "bellowing Bella." She is renowned on Capitol Hill for her short fuse and her booming voice. Her fiery temperament has driven numerous aides to seek employment in more placid surroundings.

She berated us for publishing a two-line, bottom-of-the-column item, quoting her as telling friends that "the game is up" in her race for the U.S. Senate. She shouted; she screamed; she called us names. She reduced our aide, Robin Reynolds, to tears.

We were wrong. We mistakenly put quotation marks around a statement that was intended to characterize but not quote her statement. We quoted her as saying "the game is up" in her U.S. Senate race. What she actually said was that she is in trouble and that she might not be able to pull it off. She denied vociferously that she had even made this statement. She is "on top of the heap," she bellowed.

Just in jest

We Americans are noted for living dangerously. Regardless of the advice of our doctors and dentists, who are forever urging us to go easy on our sugar intake, we went right ahead and spent $3 billion last year on candy. — Even though the Anti Pollution Center at the University of California, Riverside, has determined that cancer causing compounds have been found in the smoke of burning leaves, we courageously continue to burn them. — And if that isn't living dangerously, how about the way we are defying the repeated warnings of the Surgeon General of the United States? Cigarettes, he tells us, can be injurious to our health. So, with that perverse courage for which Americans are noted, we made it financially possible last year for 105 new brands of cigarettes to be placed on the market.

Tom Tiede

Noncandidate's dream speech

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — The following is a speech you will not hear from any of the presidential candidates this season. Too bad.

"Good evening, ladies and gentlemen.

"I know you will be happy to learn that I am not going to talk at length. Nor am I going to flatter my record, attack my opponent, or include in my remarks an outrageous gimmick to assure myself headlines in tomorrow's newspapers. I assume such nonsense is offensive to most Americans. If not, it should be. Your vote should not be purchased by the better showman in this or any other election.

"Instead, I wish to present a brief lesson in civics. To wit: it really doesn't make much difference whom you choose as president in 1976. I say this knowing better than any that there are differences between my opponent and myself, differences of style, of nuance, of personality, perhaps even of ability. But as president either of us would run the government essentially the same, that is according to the pressures from and changing attitudes of the people of the land.

"It has always been this way. Presidents do not lead in America, they follow. Of course, they do go in their own various directions regarding specific matters, but in the main they do little that the people will not allow them to do. Hence our government, as no other government, is a reflection of those it governs. Which leads me to a second part of my civics lesson: If you are unhappy with your government, and are honest about it, you must look to yourselves for the blame.

"What did I say? I said you are at fault, my friends. You are guilty of careless citizenship, of apathy in current affairs, of political ignorance and societal greed. The result is a government that mirrors your personality: It is self-centered, it is corrupt, it is fueled by voracity and it has lost its nobility. Worse, as you have withdrawn your support for it, it has withdrawn its respect for you.

"Allow me one moment for waffling, please. I am not here to accuse so much as advise. And I admit that I am exaggerating for effect. The people of this nation are as fine as those in any land on earth. As for the country itself, we must remember that it is a place where 93 per cent of those who want to work are working, where the poverty level is based on an income which in most nations would constitute middle class, where an imperfect constitutional system is nevertheless stout enough to seek out and eliminate its own aberrations.

"It is because we are so grand and have so much that I remind you of where the responsibility for our good fortune lies. The people rule. Sadly, you have not of late been ruling well. Fifty million of you did not bother to vote in the last presidential election. A significant number of you has never learned the name of your congressman. Most have not in your lifetimes performed any civic duty greater than that of paying taxes. Small wonder your government has been inherited by the irresponsible; you deserve what you've gotten.

"And what have you gotten? A government where public accountability has diminished simply because not enough of the public cares for an accounting. Leadership that genuflects to special interests because the people themselves are in the pews of those interests. And a bureaucracy that controls our lives because we have in countless ways begged it to do so. I could go on. Behind every crooked congressman there are thousands of crooked constituents. Behind every tax loophole there is an army of citizens profiteering. If government reeks, so do we.

"I say we, because I am one of you. We are all responsible for our national errors. But I am not more responsible because I have been in office and tried to serve. I've made mistakes, but no more than you. Tonight I ask you to think about that, to realize that I as your mayor or your senator or your president can do little but follow public will. If you tell me to spend, I must spend, and I must tax you for the funds to spend; if it's wrong, then the guilt is mutual.

"I want your votes, ladies and gentlemen. But unless I have your understanding also, I cannot promise you anything but politics as usual."

Our man in Washington

The conveyor of free speech

By TERRY WADE
PB Washington Writer

WASHINGTON — Four California newsmen were jailed recently for refusing to reveal the sources for stories that led to indictments against public officials.

It was not the first time and it appears it will not be the last time members of the journalistic profession are interned like common criminals for doing a job law enforcement officials won't or cannot do.

The courts are acting blindly and with out due concern for our system of government when they place a reporter and his editor's in the position of the Fresno, Calif. Newsmen.

It must be deeply frustrating to read enough facts in the local paper to justify an indictment and then find that the law enforcement officials cannot provide enough evidence to produce a conviction.

In that light it is understandable when a judge demands to know where the newspaper got the information that was printed.

Any sane person would support the courts if cases could be isolated and informants (we call them sources) still be protected.

The problem is cases cannot be isolated and sources, once betrayed, are not only lost, but take most, if not all, potential future sources with them.

Should the four Californians choose to reveal their sources, betray a trust, they would save themselves a stay in jail. They would, perhaps, bring justice to bear in that case.

But, would it be more difficult for other reporters to promise confidentiality when investigating cases that no one else can crack?

Would it mean situations like Watergate would never be fully uncovered? Do you believe that the famous Mr. "Deep Throat" of Watergate fame would have dared come forward if he had known his name would become common knowledge?

You can say that is a different situation if you choose, but the hard truth is that it is not.

Granted there may be times when a reporter's privileged position might inhibit the progress of justice, but had the reporter failed to discover the crime there would have never been an investigation in the first place.

Isn't it better that we find out about illegal situations even if our courts cannot produce convictions than to never know at all?

The four Fresno newsmen went off to jail for an indefinite sentence saying they were "firmly proud" for "defending one of our basic freedoms . . ."

Perhaps they should be proud, but we should pause to think perhaps we should be ashamed and just a little afraid, for the press does not represent itself, but all of us. For the press is the conveyor of free speech.

Correct address results in check

Early in June we received a notice from the Franchise Tax Board that we would get a refund of $84.

To date we have not received it.

Since filing we have moved to a new address but all our other mail was delivered even while we were on vacation.

Three weeks ago we sent a copy of its statement back to the board and still have not heard anything. — T.S., Pomona

We got in touch with a representative of the tax board.

He explained that the post office does not foward the board's refund checks.

When your correct address was received, the board began processing a re-issue of your check. The representative of the board promised that you would receive it shortly. You did.

Today while my daughter was in court she had a seizure. The bailiff called Cole Ambulance Service paramedics.

They took her to the Pomona Valley Community Hospital emergency room.

I was called to come and pick her up. My son had to leave for the Los Angeles International Airport on his way to Germany as he is in the service. That meant no car was available.

I called the police department to ask for transportation. I was told transportation after an emergency is over is not available.

There should be some provision for transportation in a case like this. — Mrs. E.M., Pomona

We talked with the same officer you did. He confirmed that police cars are not used to transfer people in a non-emergency situation.

Even in an emergency an ambulance is not called unless split seconds count. Then a police car may be used.

The officer did call police communications to find out what cars were available. There were only two un-engaged.

"That's not much to cover a city," he told us.

He said he made several suggestions, such as contacting friends or relatives, but you were not in a mood to listen.

I was wondering whether you could help me get my marriage certificate.

I have sent two money orders to Yuma, Ariz. Each cost me $3.

The people in Yuma keep sending me a marriage license instead of a certificate.

In Yuma County marriage licenses are issued by the clerk of the Superior Court.

When we alerted Sylvia Daniels, deputy clerk, to your complaint, she pointed out that the court issues a document consisting of the marriage license on the top half of the page and the marriage certificate on the bottom.

So you have two copies of the marriage license AND marriage certificate.

Something advantageous to you may be offered you this year from a distant source. It could come through a person who no longer resides in your vicinity.

Ann Landers

Another story on ticklers

Dear Ann Landers: I have been reading with a great deal of interest the letters about people who love to tickle under the guise of "having a little fun." You pointed out that when tickling becomes excessive and the "victim" doesn't like it and the person doing the tickling keeps it up, there's more to it than just fun. "Sadistic" is what you called it, and how right you are!

Shortly after we married, my husband used to sit on my legs, hold my hands down and tickle me until I screamed in agony and begged him to stop. He'd laugh and say, "I'm just having a little fun!"

One night he nearly drove me crazy with his tickling. I screamed, "If you don't stop I'm going to spit in your face." He snapped back, "You wouldn't dare!" Well I did it. He became so furious he beat me senseless.

The next day I took my broken jaw, black eyes and five teeth (wrapped in a handkerchief) to a lawyer and filed for divorce. The lawyer (and my doctor) said I was lucky the lunatic didn't kill me—because he was a real nut.

So, Ann, add this one to your true-to-life stories about ticklers. — Graveyard Humor

Dear G. H.: Thanks for the eye-opener. And congratulations on walking out — before you had to be carried out.

Dear Ann Landers: I need to say a few words to the young man who wrote to you and said he felt like a "non-person," "Worthless" and wanted to die.

My mother must have had those same feelings. She killed herself two years ago. Although Mom succeeded in putting an end to her suffering I can't describe what she did to her family.

I have been under psychiatric care for almost a year but I still cry a lot. I know in my heart (and head) that I was not responsible for my mother's death, but I can't stop blaming myself. I keep thinking if I had been a better daughter Mom wouldn't have wanted to hurt me like this.

My psychiatrist explained that suicide is punishment for the survivors. The person who does this dastardly deed plans it that way. It is the ultimate payback for real or imagined abuse.

I know you receive thousands of letters and can print only a few, but please try to fit this in somewhere, Ann. It might help others. — C. V.

Dear C. V.: Here it is — and I thank you for writing it. Your letter can be immensely comforting to those who are struggling with unearned guilt produced by the suicide of a loved one. God knows they need all the help they can get.

Dear Ann Landers: My problem concerns a friend of long standing. Several years ago we were having trouble with our daughter. My "friend's" sole attempt at consolation was, "I wish I had her for a year." She was, of course, putting me down and holding herself up as someone who could do my job better.

Being troubled, I didn't have a ready answer. When I look back at her lack of compassion I become furious. What should I say to her NOW? — Cut Deep

Dear Deep: Nothing. You don't really like this woman, for reasons unrelated to the early needle. Life is too short to spend time with people you don't care for. The question you ought to be asking yourself is why do you continue to see her?

John Q. pays the piper

In the average middle-class American home there is an end-of-the-month ritual called "paying the bills," or "checking out the checkbook," a rite as joyous as having an impacted wisdom tooth out.

John Q. Public's monthly confrontation with mortgage payments, utility bills, doctors' fees, credit card dues (and overdues) and assorted grocery-cleaner-car repair-liquor store arrears, is a traumatic evening in his life. Agony, guile, Artful Dogery and false bravado blend in his bosom as he pulls down his Mt. Everest pile of "Please remits" and "Overdues" and wistfully — fearfully — contemplates his miniscular bank balance.

As with all the cosmic dramas of life ("Die Gotterdammerrung," "Aida," "Jaws") the setting and production values are important. First John Q. must kick the kids off to bed. Then he must find a ballpoint that works — not an easy assignment. Finally he must place at his elbow a small glass filled with suitably potent tissue restorer. Taking a heady drag of the latter, he picks up his pen and addresses himself to the first bill.

Any communication starting "Our attorneys have been apprised . . ." comes in for instant attention. Utility bills marked "Third Notice! If this bill is not paid in full by Thursday, we will cut off your — " whatever. Better pay quick, or you'll be writing the other checks by candlelight. So John goes into his juggling act — this bill is not imperative; this should have something on it last month. Bills that will increase during the coming month — TV repairs, milk, the liquor store — should be paid in full.

Mr. Public's bills come in a motley of colored envelopes, some lean dunnings, some fat with colorful inserts for things you can buy to get even deeper into debt. Half of society is in the business of getting us into debt; the other half is in debt. Here John Q. opens a notice from a furniture store warning him that if he doesn't come across with the $310 due, they will jerk the rug out from under him. The envelope also encloses colorful flyers urging him to buy color TV and dinette sets and bedroom suites.

Many firms send their bills with return evelopes enclosed, which is peachy. Others just send the bill and you have to scrabble about for an envelope. ("Who took all the envelopes?" you bellow. Wife, sweetly: "I told you we were running low last week.") Some companies send you envelopes too short for your check, so you have to double over the end. Some send you return envelopes with transparent cellophane windows so you have to be careful to get the bill placed so the address shows. I always get the check in the way of the window and the letter is returned.

Another item that has not heretofore been a thing of consequence is the rising cost of postage. A year ago you mailed out checks to 30 firms at six cents a shot — $1.80. Peanuts. But today those same 30 bills cost you $3.90. And the service is as lousy as ever. They are still delivered before you can cover the checks at the bank!

By the end of John Q. Public's long evening of writing checks and trying to balance an unbalanceable checkbook, he has knocked back several jiggers of his pinch-bottle nerve tonic and written checks for twice what he has in the bank — the checks, as the evening wears on, becoming increasingly flamboyant and illegible.

And finally, the financial orgy drawing to a painful conclusion, John Q. Public seals the last envelope, bangs on the last stamp, gulps the final tot of bracer, and crawls off to bed, confident that in the morning he will be on the FBI's list of Ten Most Wanted Men.

Dr. Lamb

A look at flu 50 years ago

DEAR DR. LAMB — There's so much talk about the flu. I am over 70 and had it real bad when it was here before. I got it being in the big parade, November 11, when World War I ended. I was living with my grandparents. They said it was a punishment for all of us. We should have been on our knees, not out enjoying ourselves when other people had such heartache.

Well I sure did have a bad time of it. No doctor came to houses. Hospitals wouldn't take any more patients. Relatives and friends didn't go near each other. We dind't have pain pills in those days. It was castor oil, baking soda, electric oil, camphorated oil, even coal oil.

I am told I was out of my head. One of my uncles left a bottle of dark rum, heavy kind, on the step. My grandfather had to look after me and grandma, who had caught the flu from me. Pa was afraid because grandfather couldn't even make a cup of tea. Being from the old country he sure cured both of us, Grandma in three days and weeks later for me.

Here's the cure. Laugh if you like but it did the trick. He put camphorated oil in goose grease, heated it and rubbed our chest. Then he mixed up mustard and put the oil and goose grease in it between two sheets of red flannel. My chest was red for awhile; it sure was hot. Here's what he gave us for medicine. He took heavy old-fashioned molasses and put the rum in it. He put some in a cup of hot water and it really made me sweat.

Today all these old-fashioned remedies are laughed at, but it worked. I'm still around. My grandparents died when they were over 70. The old boy knew his onions, even though he couldn't boil water. What I'd like to know is what was in the dark molasses and dark heavy rum? Was it a case of get better or die? It sure was hard to take after you got on the mend.

DEAR READER — Thanks for giving us a colorful picture of the flu more than 50 years ago. From the volume of letters I have received from people who lived through the first worldwide flu epidemic it seems the treatment you described was pretty standard, with emphasis on rum and whiskey.

Alcohol is still used in the treatment of colds and flu by many people as a home remedy. It may be a sedative and help people to feel better in that sense but it does nothing to combat the virus infection causing the illness.

The only way to treat the flu properly is to prevent it and we can do this today even though that was impossible with the epidemic you survived. That is why vaccinations are so important.

Some of the other medicines may help shrink the nasal lining and make breathing easier. Supportive care in terms of adequate fluids and nourishment is the best that can be offered. The rest of the treatment is for complications. Bacterial complications, such as some pneumonias, can be treated and that will help a lot if there is a worldwide epidemic.

For more information about flu and related cold-like illness readers can send 50 cents for The Health Letter number 3-2, Colds and Flu Group, Prevention and Treatment.

East's two-diamond overcall on a four-card suit is rather unusual, but he just hated to pass with his fine hand.

South rebid to two spades and played the hand there. East cashed three diamonds and then played ace and deuce of hearts.

The hand looked like a cinch for the rest of the tricks, but South got a rude shock when West showed out on the lead of the ace of spades. Now South had to try to find a way to collect eight tricks. He entered dummy with a club and led a spade. East's nine forced South's king.

Back to dummy with another club. Lo and behold East, who had dropped the jack on the first club, played the queen this time and South was in business.

He led the good 10 of club, played the queen this time and South was in business.

He led the good 10 of clubs. East made his best play by ruffing with the 10 of trumps and South carefully underruffed. This left East on lead with the last diamond and the jack-six of spades. South held the queen of hearts and queen-eight of spades while North held a spade, heart and club.

If East led a trump, South would just take the last three tricks. If he led the last diamond South would discard his high heart, ruff in dummy and claim.

Ask the Jacobys

A Pennsylvania reader wants to know if we overcall a spade opening with two hearts. Your hand is:

♠ 9 3 ♥ A K J 6 4 ♦ K 9 3 ♣ 8 6 4.

Both sides are vulnerable.

We recommend a pass since there is too much danger of running into real trouble. Still, if you like to live dangerously a two-heart overcall is not the worst bid ever made.

Big mystery about bamboo

You've long known that bamboo is a kind of grass. But were you aware that some bamboo only blooms every 60 years? What's mysterious about such is why every member plant in those species no matter where in the world it is will put out its blossoming tassels at exactly the same time.

QUERIES FROM CLIENTS

Q. "What's the preferred way to serve turnips?"

A. Depends on the nationality. The Egyptians like them pickled. The Italians, stuffed. The Greeks, raw. The Chinese, stirfried. The French, braised. And there are those others who'd rather see them dished up as pork chops after having been fed to the pigs.

Q. "How many patents are there for perpetual motion machines?"

A. None. The law says you can't patent any device that doesn't work, that's why.

Q. "Which has the best chance statistically of making a success out of a second marriage, widow or a divorcee?"

A. A widow.

Q. "Do Siamese twins always go to sleep and wake up at the same time?"

A. No, unfortunately. Their internal clocks are now always in synch.

GRAND CANYON

Here's to Lt. Joseph C. Ives, Corps of Engineers, 1861 — clink! — who said: "the Grand Canyon is, of course, altogether useless. Ours has been the first and will doubtless be the last party of whites to visit the profitless locality." Lt. Ives was not the first Corps of Engineers officer to err. Nor the last. But he is noteworthy as the standard bearer of a long tradition.

Yea God: a typical day in a typical commune

Editor's Note: This last of three articles on communes, chronicles the day's activities in one commune.

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer

WEST DANBY, N.Y. (AP) — The deep, hollow sound of a goat horn sent an almost pagan sennet through the tall trees. It was morning at Yea God.

From domed, circular huts called yurts and crude teepees and tents emerge the faithful, ready to sing their way into another day of praising the Lord.

Barefoot and bleary-eyed, they assemble in a huge domed meeting place in the middle of the commune for their morning song. They sit on musty Persian rugs, the women in their long cotton dresses; the men in dungaree overalls. They assume the yoga lotus position and sing of love for Jesus.

Yea God is a four-year-old spiritual commune of about 40 members, who practice a handclapping, fill - me - with - the - Spirit brand of Christianity. Neither Yea God nor any other commune can serve as an archetype for all others. Some communes have rather traditional middle-class values and living patterns. Others have a back-to-the-earth flavor. Still others are politically motivated. And some are based on religion.

But all communes have one thing in common: the people, living so closely together, must cooperate if the community is to survive.

Yea God is trying to survive on religion. Their 39-year-old leader is a tall, lanky former insurance executive who calls himself Gil.

Gil, in turn, has given everyone else on the commune names. They are Ocean, Vast and Rock; Radiant, Bumblee and Love; Twinkle, Baby and Glory; Glow, Health and Virtue; Christian, Angel and Exquisite. They don't use their real names.

"The chipmunks eat from our hands and the chickadees land on our fingers," said Gil, rocking in an outdoor swing whose seat was once a pew in a church. "It's more important to be in a spiritual sense than to have prosperity."

It was late morning. The singing session was over and commune dwellers were off to work in the vegetable garden or to mediate in the woods. Glory, Gil's assistant, arrived with a platter of overripe melons. The Yea God members often eat overripe fruit because they can get it free from the highway produce truckers.

"Our lifestyle is a lot cheaper than you think," said Gil, who punctuates his statements every now and then with a soft "Praise the Lord."

He said it cost less than $1,000 a year for one person to live on the commune. The vegetables and fruit they grow they consume. Donations of money, clothing, food and other goods from visitors and relatives also help.

"We have no restrictions here, except our guests and members must be receptive to love," Gil said in a voice barely above a whisper.

No one at Yea God shouts or speaks louder than necessary to be heard. Even the children speak in hushes.

The commune dwellers are vegetarians and, along with meat, shun sugar and chemicals in food. Gil likes to pass out his favorite snack to the children: a concoction of raisins, sunflower seeds and cocoanut all wrapped together.

Commune members purchased the 70 acres of farmland and woods for $150 an acre, Gil said. They pooled their resources — savings, insurance claims, donations from parents and inheritances. All structures on the land were built by them with available material — wood, stone, tar, fabric, newspaper.

In addition to the central dome, which also has sleeping space for about 15 people on its second floor, there are about 25 tar-covered yurts and teepees and about five tents and leantos. There also is a bathhouse and a kitchen, a church and one outhouse. There is no electricity and little heat.

And when the arctic winds blow from Canada down across the Finger Lakes, the people at Yea God get very cold.

The yurts do have small wood-burning stoves for heat. So do the large Dome, the bathhouse and kitchen. But they are not enough. Even in the summer, the commune dwellers wrap themselves in shawls and sweaters.

"I'm leaving for California in the fall," said Radiant, a 36-year-old native of Berkeley. "No way. I'm not going to spend another winter in that cold Dome squeezed in between dirty bodies."

She regrets the move, she said, because Yea God "is the only spiritual commune I've known where the people live in such incredible love.

"The minute I put my foot on the land I knew I was home."

The people at Yea God call each other "sweet heart" and "honey" when not using commune names. "Sweet" is a word they use to describe anything beautiful, nice or good.

It is midday. The sun is hot and the insects abound. The long skirts the women wear help protect them from bites. But the naked babies and everyone else with exposed flesh suffer. The commune dwellers practice herb medicine; they do not use insect repellants.

Twinkle is the herb expert and midwife. She has not yet had an opportunity to deliver a baby. At the moment she has a bad summer cold. Herbs will not help, so she takes prescription antibiotics. She spends a quiet day in her yurt with her 2½-year-old son, Baby Love, reading him "Bambi," one of the few books on the commune.

Many of the commune folk pass the day milling about the great Dome, where they receive their mail and other messages from the outside world. Mothers stop by with infants, some being breast-fed. They swap childbearing experiences.

Tiny tots such as Baby Love romp about naked in the nearby sandpile. Some sneak into the kitchen to pilfer a peach or apple. There, Ocean stands in cutoff blue jeans and T-shirt before a huge vat of green beans. He will make them into a casserole for the evening meal.

Larger children explore the hidden mysteries of the quiet forest, ignoring the dangers of poison ivy and snakes. Six-year-old Sunshine slips out of her long cotton dress and jumps into the large fresh water pond.

Health and Christian and a dozen or so other adults hover over the vegetable garden, pulling weeds, picking greens and tomatoes that are ready and tending to the plants so they will produce well.

Rebe and two others eye the base construction for the commune's new two-story laundry, bathhouse and child care center. They are laying pipes for plumbing.

The horn sounds again. It is time for the women to bathe. Water is heated, Scrub brushes, water buckets and ladles are lined up in front of the stalls. Sunshine and other small children are put in large tubs, filled with bubbles. The children are unmindful of the nakedness of the adult women.

An hour later the horn sounds again. This time the men bathe.

Clothes are changed, and the Yea God people buzz about waiting for the trucks that will carry them to church that night. Neighboring farmers finally drive up with their pickups. The commune people hop on the back, and the trucks chug off down the dirt roads.

The church is the St. John Finnish Evangelical Lutheran Church in West Van Etten. It is to be a special evening service, featuring the singing of a Christian rock group from North Carolina called The Bridge.

On the bumpy, dusty journey down the hill to the church the commune people turn their faces to the wind and start to sing hymns. Soon they are clapping and stomping in true revival fashion. They are happy.

"Jesus is live," sings 19-year-old Vast from Brazil.

"Jesus is glory," sings 20-year-old Glow from Syracuse, N.Y.

The church meeting is a community affair. Women from other parishes have brought home baked cookies and breads. The Yea God people donate popcorn and wheat bread cookies.

"People really touch you a lot and become part of your life," Glow says as she sips fruit punch. "That's what I've learned and that's what I like most about being here."

Glow said she was working in a hospital in Syracuse and finally could no longer function. "Life in the city was very harrowing," she said. "I needed the country for peace, trees, flowers and for time to gather my thoughts."

There was much singing and shouting and testifying at the church meeting. And when it was over commune folk as well as community folk smiled at each other and prayed together.

But some Yea God people are disillusioned.

"I'm leaving tomorrow for home" said 20-year-old Exquisite from Connecticut. "I want to be able to serve by doing something and not just by praying."

Others plan to leave the commune because they say they are bored. Gil does not cotton to television, radio or movies because, he says, they corrupt.

"The ideal would be to have a part-time job in town in social work and spend two days on the commune," said 27-year-old Good, whose real name is Jim.

Johnny Wonder's QUESTION CORNER

Q. "WHAT IS THE STATUE OF LIBERTY MADE OF?"

ARLA GRAY
GREEN VALLEY, AZ

A. THE STATUE OF LIBERTY IS MADE OF MORE THAN 300 COPPER PLATES FASTENED TO AN IRON AND STEEL FRAME. THE TORCH IS GLASS.

Dick Rabeo 9/10

The Statue of Liberty is one of the United States' most famous monuments.

This colossal statue of a robed lady with a torch in her raised right hand and carrying a tablet in her left, stands on Liberty Island in New York Harbor.

It is made of more than 300 copper sheets over a steel and iron framework.

It was designed in 1881 by a French sculptor, Frederic Auguste Bartholdi, and was presented to the people of the United States as a gift from the people of France.

Working from a model only 49 inches high, Bartholdi worked up a full-sized wood and plaster model which was divided into sections.

Next, thin copper sheets were hammered over the wooden molds and shaped to their contours. The copper shells were then bolted to the central framework.

The statue was taken apart for shipment from France and reassembled in the United States.

Even though it is hollow the statue weighs 225 tons. It is 151 feet tall.

A World Almanac globe or other fine prize will be awarded to the first youngster sending in a question used here. Send your question and your age to Johnny Wonder, (c/o this newspaper), Box 1335 (DA), Santa Cruz, CA 95061.

LWV charts fall activity

The League of Women Voters of Pomona-Diamond Bar will open its fall activities with a meeting for prospective and current members Monday at 7:30 p.m. at 683 S. Farben Drive, Diamond Bar.

Highlighting the evening will be a slide show "Women in Politics" and a talk on that topic by Judy Orttung, member of the state league board.

The show, prepared by the LWV of the United States, reports that 40 per cent of women in politics today got their start through the League of Women Voters. The show provides background on how women enter the political field and what politics can offer them. It focuses on various women politicians serving at the local, state and national levels of government.

The meeting also will provide orientation about the league for new and prospective members. League activities provide services to voters and conducts yearly interviews with state and national legislators, observes city council and local commissions and publishes books and articles on political issues and local communities. It is non-political.

Anyone interested in attending the Monday meeting may call Mrs. Dorothy Baker, 595-7682.

60 cadets charge

Lying, cheating common at West Point

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — They pass along exam questions at meals. They lie about attendance. They steal athletic equipment. And, according to affidavits signed by cadets accused in the U.S. Military Academy's biggest scandal, they do so with abandon.

In the 151 affidavits shown to The Associated Press on Wednesday, some 60 cadets charge nearly 700 other cadets with flaunting the honor code by lying, cheating, stealing, fixing cases before the cadet honor committee and tolerating those activities.

Two affidavits allege that a member of the Class of 1974 accepted a $1,200 bribe to return the single not-guilty vote needed to free another cadet of charges against him.

Other affidavits say mere friendship of a member of the 88-cadet honor committee is often enough to win innocent verdicts. Still others say incidents of cheating are far too numerous to list.

"It would be futile to try and document the exact times and dates that this occurred since it became habitual all the way until and including the term end exam," one cadet swore.

He referred to the practice of writing formulas, equations and various sample problems in the margins of t e mathematics texts permitted during tests.

"I can remember many instances in which 'poop sessions' were given by someone who had already taken an exam. The size of these poop sessions ranged from five to 10 to literally entire companies, and from there it spread to other companies throughout the regiment, usually by word of mouth," an affidavit read.

The worst scandal in West Point's 174-year history has touched 226 cadets to date. Of that number, 149 have admitted their guilt in collaborating on graded homework, lost appeals of allegations they did so or left for other reasons. Four cases are pending.

The accused cadets assembled the affidavits to support their contention that the honor system here has failed, that cheating is so widespread that to punish them by forcing them to leave for a year or for good is unjust.

Portions of the affidavits, with the names of those cited abbreviated to maintain their confidentiality, follow:

—"M.F., member of the Army ... team told me my plebe year that cheating was the only way to get by the academic load and still play athletics."

—"W.L. and M.J. collaborated with C.H. on a government case study in late May. R.B. received help in law from E.C. and S.F. ... S.L. and B.M. cheated by fixing their golf scores in physical education. J.M. stole C-rations."

—"P.G. told me that G.T. had frequently fixed boards by planting an honor representative to vote not guilty. Since he was secretary, he assigned the members who sat on individual boards."

—"In September of 1975, Cadet R.C.O. gave me a folder full of old research papers that he had accumulated over the years, one of which was his own paper that he had turned in and received a 'B' on. I was to turn in a paper on the same topic, and he advised I use his so as to be assured of a decent grade."

Breast removal affects husbands

LOS ANGELES (AP) — One of four women who underwent removal of a breast considered suicide after the operation, although nearly all felt there had been no change in their sexual relations after the surgery, a survey has shown.

The study also revealed that husbands of the women surveyed can have as much trouble coping with their wives' mastectomy operations as the women themselves.

Dr. Robert Pasnau, one of three UCLA researchers who interviewed 31 couples about two years after mastectomy operations, said Wednesday the survey had two surprising results.

"The first was that many of the women were so upset after the operation that they actually contemplated suicide.

"The second was that one out of every five or six men, even after a length of time — 22 months on the average, still hadn't been able to look at their wives unclothed."

He said that contrary to popular belief, the women did not seem to be reluctant to show their husbands their scar. It was the men who did not want to see it.

"The men need a lot more support than we thought. We've been trying to prepare the women psychologically for the operation, but the men have a physchological need, too."

The survey showed that one out of four women seriously considered suicide after the mastectomy. Nearly all the women felt there had been no change in their sexual relations following the operation.

More men reportedly said their sexual relations became totally unsatisfactory after the operation.

Bruins ruin Sun Devil dreams

BYE BYE SUN DEVILS

UCLA halfback Wendell Tyler gets outside and races around end against Arizona State defenders. Tyler gained 93 yards on 21 carries as the Bruins stunned ASU, 28-10.

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — The 1976 football season has been dubbed as Arizona State's "year to make history"—the first real chance for the Sun Devils to win the mythical national title. However, somebody forgot to tell the UCLA Bruins and their quarterback, senior Jeff Dankworth.

Dankworth, overshadowed the past two years by All-American John Sciarra, guided the awesome Bruins' ground attack as it chewed up 486 yards en route to a 28-10 rout of the third-ranked Sun Devils in a nationally televised game Thursday night.

The victory not only left the Devils aghast, but also nearly all of the 50,876 fans who packed Sun Devil Stadium and witnessed the nation's longest major college winning streak snapped at 13.

"We're fortunate to have had three weeks to prepare for this game," said Dankworth. "That's longer, of course, than for most games.

"Our whole game plan really was the counter-option and counter-dive, because they do so much stacking, overshifting, stunting and blitzing."

Dankworth attained near perfection in executing the game plan, and himself rushed for 155 yards on 19 carries, scoring twice.

Sophomore halfback Theotis Brown added another 127 yards and two TDs, while running back Wendell Tyler contributed an additional 93 yards on 21 attempts.

While the offense came up with 509 total yards, the Bruins' defense kept Arizona State from mounting any serious threat, allowing the Devils only 137 yards on the ground and 150 through the air.

Arizona State fullback Freddie Williams, who has rushed for over 1,000 yards in each of the past two seasons, was held to 70 yards on 13 carries. The Devils' top rusher for the night was freshman halfback Arthur Lane from Pomona's Ganesha High, who carried the ball 11 times for 74 yards.

"We were embarrassing, both offensively and defensively," observed a very dejected Frank Kush, who is now in his 19th year as head coach at Arizona State. "I thought our offense would be more productive, but they weren't. Our line just did not do a good job. They didn't play the way they are capable of."

The Sun Devils capatilized on a recovered fumble late in the opening period to score a 29-yard field goal, which was booted by Kush's son, Danny. But they were shut out between then and the last 2½ minutes of the game, when they got their first touchdown on a 15-yard pass from quarterback Dennis Sproul to split end John Jefferson in the end zone.

After the Arizona State three-pointer, the Bruins took the ensuing kickoff and mounted an 80-yard march that culminated with a 32-yard scoring scamper by Dankworth.

"They took the fake outside, and I cut back in," explained Dankworth. "This is the type of offense that works against a team like ASU."

UCLA got its second touchdown with 4:36 left in the first half as Dankworth kept the ball on a broken play at the Arizona State one-yard line and ran into the end zone.

Brown, a 6-foot-3, 215-pound running back, accounted for the final two touchdowns for the victors with scoring runs of 2 and 26 yards in the third period.

"Against ASU it's extremely difficult to pass because they blitz you so much, so we felt we had to rush the ball," said Donahue. "To tell the truth, I wanted to pass more, but I got a little bit nervous. I've been a running coach for so long, it's sort of hard to change."

Kush probably wishes Donahue had gone to the air more, but adds that, "we were just not mentally prepared. That's my responsibility, so we'll just have to work harder. We have a long way to go."

The UCLA-Arizona State clash marked the season's first meeting of ranked teams. Two more such pairings are on tap Saturday when every other member of The Associated Press Top Twenty will be in action. Besides UCLA and Arizona State, the only ranked teams to have begun play are No. 19 Kansas, which defeated Oregon State last weekend, and No. 20 Miami of Ohio, a loser to North Carolina.

In Saturday's Top Twenty matchups, ninth-ranked Pitt tangles with No. 11 Notre Dame at South Bend, Ind., while No. 15 California visits No. 16 Georgia.

Lasorda gets players' vote

Bill Langley

Progress Bulletin Sports Editor

If the Dodger players had any choice about who will replace Walter Alston when the veteran Dodger skipper announces his retirement, there's no doubt it would be third base coach Tommy Lasorda.

That really isn't much of a surprise.

Everybody figures Lasorda will be the man. He is a popular figure who has been in the Dodger organization for 27 years.

For years, Lasorda has been patiently awaiting his turn at the manager's job. It has been said his blood is Dodger blue.

Shortstop Bill Russell, who has been the team's most consistent player this season, certainly gives Lasorda a big endorsement.

"Everybody likes Lasorda," Russell said at a special press breakfast Thursday. "I would think the majority of the players would want him as the next manager. If the Dodgers stay within the organization, he should get it. Tommy is the type of guy the players would give their all for. It's obvious most of the starting players have played for him in the minor leagues."

While Russell was full of praise for Lasorda, he was also quick to give Alston plenty of credit.

Lot of respect

"Walt and Tommy are two different personalities," Russell said. "I have a lot of respect for Walt. If it wasn't for him, I don't know where I would be today. He showed a lot of confidence in me. If you can't play for Walt, you can't play for anybody."

Russell said the Dodger players weren't surprised about the reports on Wednesday about Alston's retirement after the season even though both the Dodgers and Alston have said nothing has been decided as yet.

We knew Walt would finish out the season but most of us have had the feeling he would retire after the season," the Dodger shortstop said. "But until he does, who knows? I would say some want him back and some don't but that's true on every club. This shouldn't affect us at all."

Alston is known to be a patient, quiet man but the Dodger skipper did have some words with Russell early in the season when he benched him because of a poor start at the plate.

"When Walt sat me down for 10 days, it got me going," Russell recalled. "We had a little talk because Walt felt I wasn't being aggressive enough because I felt I didn't have to fight for my job. It was the first time I needed a talk like that."

"That was the turning point for me," Russell continued. "It got me back on the right track. I won't forget that lesson, that's for sure."

Russell has enjoyed a steady, sparkling season with a .283 batting average with 59 RBIs. He has also done the job well on the field.

Best season

"This is the best season I've ever had," Russell commented. "I credit a lot of it to work last winter when I ran five miles a day and lifted weights. My legs feel a lot stronger. I'm in the best physical shape ever."

The 27-year-old shortstop has rebounded well from a .206 average last year when he was on the injury list about half the campaign.

"I was trying to come back from injuries and found out how tough it is," Russell says about the 1975 season.

Russell has been at his best when the Dodgers need the big hit.

"I am a better hitter with two outs and a runner in scoring position," he said. "I seem to concentrate more in that situation."

While Russell has enjoyed a good season, he hasn't received much recognition but the soft-spoken resident of Broken Arrow, Okla. isn't concerned about it.

"I just like to do my job and not worry about awards and recognition," he said. "I must be doing better because I haven't been booed this year."

Trying to say it and not appear too boastful, Russell does feel he is now the best shortstop in the National League.

"I'm not going to win any Golden Gloves because I play the game more recklessly than most shortstops," he said. "I feel I have the best arm of any shortstop."

As most Dodger fans know, Russell is a converted shortstop making the move from the outfield in 1970.

"The Dodgers needed a replacement for Maury (Wills) so Monty Basgall worked with me in the Arizona Instructional League," Russell said. "The move definitely helped my career and shortstop is the ideal position for me."

Can the Dodgers still catch the Reds in the final weeks of the 1976 campaign?

"Yes, we can," Russell quickly replied. "There's no doubt about it. But we can't afford any more losses. Cincinnati is the type of team which makes it tough."

Borg ousts defending champ

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — The king is dead, but he went down fighting.

Manuel Orantes, the defending titlist at the U.S. Open Tennis Championships, was eliminated by Bjorn Borg 4-6, 6-0, 6-2, 5-7, 6-4 in a thrilling quarterfinal match Thursday, but not before throwing a royal scare into the 20-year-old Swede.

"Afraid? Sure I was afraid," said the second-seeded Borg. "I was sure I had the match won. I thought he had given up. Then, all of a sudden, we're even again."

It was a familiar scenario for Orantes. Last year, the gritty Spaniard trailed Guillermo Vilas 2-1 in sets and 5-0 in games in the fourth set, but saved five match points and went on to win their semifinal in five sets.

This time, as late afternoon shadows swept across the stadium court at the West Side Tennis Club, Orantes trailed 2-1 in sets and 4-0 in the fourth set.

"I thought the match was over," said the short, muscular Spaniard, who was seeded sixth. "I felt I couldn't get much more tired, so why not go for the points? I decided to try everything."

Suddenly, his passing shots were staying withing the sidelines instead of sailing wide, the lobs were tucking inside the baseline instead of floating out. Borg's strategy was the same—serve hard, rush the net at every chance—but suddenly it wasn't working.

"What could I do?" Borg said. "He was hitting a winner on every point."

Orantes ran off three games in a row, then the players held service to 5-4. In the 10th game, the champion fought off match point with a shot that nicked the baseline and broke the Swede with still another brilliant passing shot. He held his own service, then broke Borg's with three passing shots and a double-fault by the young Swede at set point.

"I thought about what happened to Vilas last year," said Borg, who never shows any emotion on the court. "Orantes is a player who never gives up. When it was two sets all, I knew anything could happen."

Almost, but not quite. With the fifth set at 3-3, Borg regained command as Orantes sent a backhand wide, then hit an easy forehand into the net to lose his service. The Swede held his next two service games, closing out the match.

"You have to be lucky to win matches like that," Borg said after the three-hour, 10-minute marathon.

That match, before a crowd of 16,184, overshadowed an earlier men's quarter-final in which fifth-seeded Ilie Nastase, the tempestuous Romanian, whipped Dick Stockton of Dallas 4-6, 6-4, 6-2, 6-3. And it's not easy to steal the thunder from Nastase.

The 30-year-old Nastase took a while to get untracked, losing his serve in the first game of the first set and never recouping. But he gradually wore down Stockton with his power game, running him from side to side and rushing the net behind his booming serve.

"He's serving harder than ever," said Stockton. "I was struggling to hold my serve just about every game the last three sets, and it's hard to put pressure on his serve when I'm struggling to hold my own."

Nastase was relatively well behaved, as was the crowd. He did pause to argue with a photographer at one point, however, and that irked Stockton.

"I had won the first set, was down 4-5 in the second set and was serving at 30-all," he recalled. "It was a pretty important time in the match. The delay hurt my concentration. All

The women took over the stadium court today for the singles semifinals. Top-seeded Chris Evert met Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia in one match, while in a battle of Australians, second-rated Evonne Goolagong took on 10th-seeded Dianne Fromholtz.

The women's final will be played Saturday, with the men's title to be decided Sunday.

Giants drop Dodgers 10 games behind Reds

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's surprising to some, perhaps, that San Francisco has won 10 out of 15 games this season from Los Angeles.

But not to the irrepressible Count, John Montefusco.

"We're a better club, that's why," he said after the Giants polished off the Dodgers again Thursday night 4-2 at Dodger Stadium, dropping Los Angeles 10 games back of Cincinnati in the National League West.

The Reds' "magic number" for clinching the divisional title is now 13.

"When we came in here the Dodgers were only eight games out," Montefusco said, delighting in his next remark: "But now look at 'em. We like to pound on these guys."

Montefusco hurled the first six innings, enough for his 15th victory. "This wasn't that satisfying 'cause I didn't go nine," he said.

Gary Lavelle finished up, hurling three perfect innings for his 11th save and second in as many nights.

It was a two-run home run by Gary Thomasson in the seventh inning that broke a 2-2 tie and gave the Giants their eighth win in their last nine games.

San Francisco returns to Candlestick Park tonight to face Cincinnati. The Dodgers begin a four-game series tonight against Atlanta in Dodger Stadium.

Dodger manager Walt Alston says he plans to rest shortstop Bill Russell at least for the opening game of the series. Russell, after hitting at or near .300 all season, has fallen to .283 with only one hit his last 16 at bats and only five in his last 46.

The Giants took a 1-0 lead in the first inning against loser Tommy John, 8-10, when Bobby Murcer doubled home Gary Matthews who had singled after two were out.

Murcer drove home the Giants' second run in the sixth with a single. It was Murcer's 81st RBI of the year and 16th against Los Angeles.

Los Angeles came back to tie in the home half of the sixth when Reggie Smith opened the inning with his 16th home run, eighth as a Dodger, and Steve Garvey, who reached base on an error, eventually came home on a wild pitch.

Chris Speier led off the Giants' seventh with a single that caromed over the head of third baseman Ron Cey and then Thomasson, after twice failing to sacrifice, hit his home run into the rightfield pavilion.

Al Sandoval wins on KO

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Unbeaten Alberto Sandoval, 117¾, of Pomona, Calif., knocked out Raul Pacheco, 116, of Mexicali, Mexico, in 2 minutes 25 seconds of the fifth round of a scheduled 10-round fight Thursday night at the Olympic Auditorium.

Pacheco was down twice for eight-counts, from a left hook and right cross, in the fifth round. He was reeling about the ring under a flurry of punches when referee Larry Rozadilla stopped the fight.

It was the 15th victory for Sandoval and his ninth knockout. Pacheco is 18-5.

Poettgen leads Cal Poly defense

CORONADO — Cal Poly defensive coaches are reporting that right cornerback Jim Poettgen has been starting in pre-season camp from where he left off last year.

If that's true, then opposing offenses are going to have considerable trouble scoring against the Broncos in 1976. Poettgen had 12 interceptions in 1975 to lead the nation in that category.

The 5-10, 170-pound senior from Mission Viejo has impressed the coaches with his efforts at the Broncos' training camp, being held on the Naval Amphibious Base on Coronado Island, near San Diego.

However, the first real test for Poettgen and the rest of the defense comes Saturday at 7:30 p.m. as Cal Poly opens the 1976 football season, hosting Cal State Fullerton at Kellogg Field.

"He (Poettgen) was an All-American last year and definitely quite deserving of such an honor," said Jimmy Skipper, Bronco defensive secondary coach. "He's a very intelligent player and has certainly been looking excellent here at camp. He should repeat as an All-American this year and be a top pick in the pro football draft."

Poettgen is just one element in his team's defensive plans. Strong safety Doug Hughes, six-feet, 190 pound sophomore from Pomona's Garey High has "been looking super and is playing with a lot more confidence than he had last year, when he started for us as a freshman," head coach Andy Vinci said.

With the graduation of Tony Falls, who blocked six punts last year, a battle for the starting left cornerback spot looms between seniors Terry Smith of San Diego and Robin Benelli of Leucadia.

Sophomore Mike Frierson of Los Angeles is the leading candidate for starter at free safety.

"Mike is super quick, which means that he covers a lot of ground," Vinci remarked. Skipper says that freshmen Jim Middleton of Pomona and Beno Lee of Duarte will see plenty of time at strong safety, also.

Defensive line coach Bob Long looks for an improved line this season.

"The kids have been working very hard and have been improving every day and are doing what we're looking for," said Long, who joins the Broncos this season after three years as a high school coach and instructor in Houston, Texas. Long played on the taxi squad of the New York Giants in 1970.

Moving from a third-string job as a defensive end in 1975 to first-string at nose guard is 6-3, 220-pound senior Ben Merchant of Carson. However, junior Forest McClendon of Los Angeles has impressed the coaches with his hustle, and figures to see playing time at nose guard.

The Broncos shouldn't be hurting at the defensive ends, where experience (three seniors, two juniors, and one freshman) is available.

Senior Max Weischedel of Hemet will start at strong end with junior Bill Griffith of Visalia playing at the fast end spot, according to new defensive ends coach Lowell Johnson, a coach for 10 years at Alhambra High school.

"Damon Petta (a senior from West Covina), David Pekarcik (senior from Anaheim), Dave Nelson (junior from Fallbrook) and Mike Miller (freshman from Downey) also will play quite a bit," said Johnson. "We will keep fresh ends in the game at all times, necessitating the use of all of them."

Senior Rich Kluck of Thousand Oaks will be at right linebacker, with senior Mike Mayoral of Los Angeles at left linebacker. They are backed up by Steve Boron of Canyon Country, Ricardo Gallegos of Los Angeles, Chris Rice of La Puente, and Carlos Perez of Los Angeles.

Citrus faces rough opener

By JIM McCONNELL
PB Staff Writer

Citrus College will kick off the valley's junior college grid season with a flourish tonight.

The Owls will be carrying an 11-game unbeaten string (only one loss in the past 21 games) into tonight's non-league clash with a highly touted Fullerton JC squad. Gametime is set for 7:30 p.m. at Anaheim's Glover Stadium (formerly La Palma Park).

Fullerton, which compiled a 7-2 mark and a second-place finish in the rugged South Coast Conference last year, is returning virtually intact for the 1976 campaign.

How good are the Hornets veteran FJC skipper Hal Sherbeck has back? Well, on paper at least, they are a most impressive crew . . . so good, in fact, that Fullerton has pulled down the number one ranking in the pre-season JC grid poll by the California JC Athletic Bureau.

John Strycula's Owls can't brag about nearly as many returning starters, but the Citrus coach, like Sherbeck, has produced nothing but winners in his tenure at the JC level. Based on the Owls 9-0-2 1975 mark, and the winning ways of Strycula-coached teams, Citrus pulled down a number nine rating in the State JC poll.

Even so, Citrus will travel to Anaheim tonight in the distinct role of the underdog.

The Hornets' offensive attack figures to center around a pair of talented sophomores — quarterback Morris Bledsoe and tailback Monty Bullerdick.

Bledsoe completed 80 of 156 aerials last year, 18 of those completions going for TDs. Bullerdick churned for 936 yards rushing in '75, averaging 104 yards a game on the ground.

Other talented Hornets to watch are flanker Monty Coleman, who snagged 19 passes last fall good for 405 yards and six touchdowns, and kicker Dave Donk, who booted 25 successful conversions and six field goals as a freshman.

In all, Fullerton saw 40 lettermen return to the practice field this year, along with 56 freshmen and six transfers. The Hornets will enjoy the presence of 14 of last year's 22 starters.

While no one doubts the efficiency of the Fullerton offense, the Hornets had some problems on defense last year and whether or not that defense has been upgraded is a question the Owls can help solve tonight.

"Fullerton is always tough, always one of the best in the state, so we'll have our job cut out for us tonight," Strycula noted. "They have all those starters back, which will make them one of the top-ranked teams in the state this season. We've always felt that by playing the bigger schools in the pre-season, we're better off when our conference games come around. As long as we don't get hurt, that is."

The Owl starting backfield of last year, QB Herb Daniel and running backs Roy Prather and Herbie Holmes, have graduated. Slated to fill their shoes on this year's Citrus eleven are QB Dale Bunn, a Monrovia High grad who played for the University of Hawaii last year, and backs Obie Graves and Raymond Butler.

On defense, Strycula will have to replace, among others, all-conference linebackers Coolidge Goodall and John Harris, both now at California.

However, the Owls do have all-conference defensive end Gene Esslin back for his sophomore season, along with 1975 starters tackles Henry Camerena and Jim Escobedo.

Also a plus for Strycula's squad is the return of punter Gary McKenzie, rated as one of the top JC booters in the state. Place kicker Bill Darrell also is back for his second season in Owl blue and white.

Brett, Mingori rescue Royals

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The jury is still out on the Kansas City Royals, but George Brett and Steve Mingori presented a convincing case in their support Thursday night.

"We just haven't been getting any luck and hopefully this will carry us through," remarked Brett after delivering a two-out single to center to drive in DAve Nelson and give the Royals a 6-5, 10-inning victory over the California Angels.

"It this doesn't get us going, I don't know what will."

Brett, sent to a hospital the night before after being injured while trying to break up a double play, contributed five singles to Kansas City's 18-hit attack as the Royals remained five games ahead of the Oakland A's in the American League West.

The Royals had lost four in a row and nine of their last 10, and had managed just nine hits and one run in their two previous games with the Angels.

But they came back three times Thursday night to erase California leads, including a 5-3 deficit with two outs in the ninth.

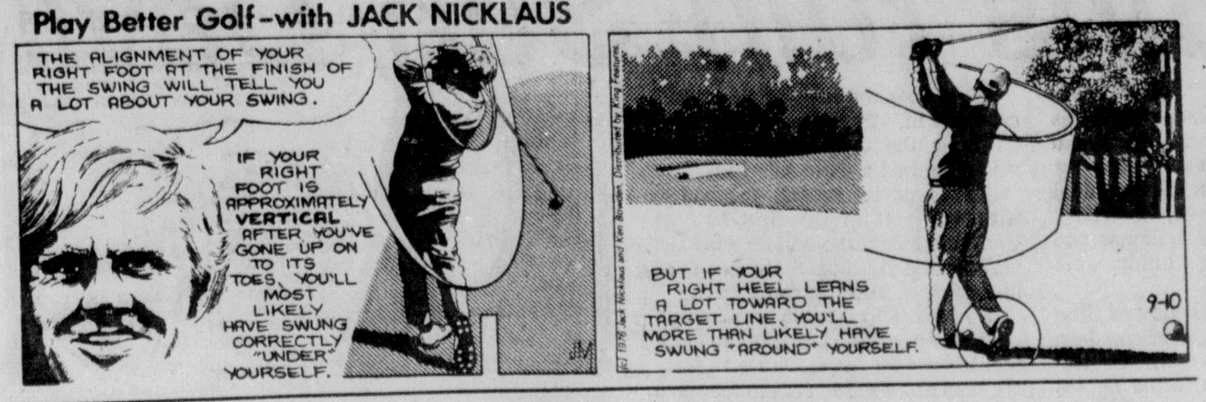

Getting the victory was Mingori, 4-4, who shut out the Angels on two hits after taking over for Dennis Leonard with one out in the eighth.

"I'd say it was an important victory," commented Mingori. "It was probably our biggest game of the year.

"But it's funny, with one out in the ninth I turned to Galen Cisco (Royals' pitching coach) and we both said 'We're going to win this thing.' "

Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog refused to predict the victory would reverse the sagging fortunes of the Royals, who are being pressed for the first time since they grabbed the lead in mid-May.

C-M hosts polo squads

By JIM McCONNELL
PB Staff Writer

It had to be something of a national embarrassment this past summer when, while the U.S. swimmers were dominating their event at the Montreal Olympics, the U.S. water polo squad never even QUALIFIED for the Games.

If Claremont-Mudd's Page Remillard has anything to do about it, that sort of situation won't happen again.

The industrious water polo and swimming coach of the Stags has been a man on the go of late, gearing up for the start of the fall water polo campaign.

He recently returned from a water polo clinic at New Mexico State U. in Las Cruces, and is currently helping C-M play host to the NMS and Brown U. polo squads.

"What a lot of people don't realize about water polo is that, while it is really a big sport in parts of Southern California, it's not that well-known or played in other parts of the country," Remillard claims. "That's one of the things I feel has to change for the sport to reach its full potential.

"I think many of the nation's large universities are just now realizing that they can't hope to attract the top talent for their swim programs without having a correspondingly strong water polo program. Kids want to participate in both sports.

"A good example is Mike Harbottle, who was an outstanding swimmer and water polo player at Montclair High last year.

"Mike decided to go to New Mexico St., rather than some other schools, because he knew he could play water polo and also swim competitively."

Remillard feels that it was an unfortunate, if not totally unexpected, situation this past summer for the U.S. polo squad not to even make it out of the trials.

"Our approach to water polo as an Olympic sport has to change. It needs to be treated as a first-class team sport, just like basketball, and not as a secondary or "minor" sport.

"We have to attract the top swimmers to water polo and then make sure they receive top-notch coaching. I also feel the method of selection for the Olympic team has been faulty. Too often in the past some of the top water polists have not made the team, due to poor coaching and administration. This should never happen."

Remillard, in his first season as head coach at Claremont-Mudd, has been busy trying to upgrade the Stag schedule and program into top-flight status.

"That's one reason why it's great to have these teams from New Mexico St. and Brown out here. It benefits their program as well as ours, and helps build interest in the sport in the community."

The two visiting teams will be at Claremont-Mudd for two weeks, and during that time will compete in several scrimmages and full-dress matches. Trips to Disneyland, Knotts' Berry Farm and local pro sporting events are also planned.

Highlight of the two teams' stay in Southern California figures to be Sept. 16, when they will join Remillard's Stag netters in an all-day water polo clinic at UCLA.

"UCLA is one of the national powers in the sport," Remillard notes. "It's coach, Bob Horn, is an excellent teacher of the game. I feel the clinic will be beneficial to all four teams."

The out-of-staters will wind up their visit on Saturday, Sept. 18 at the Stags' pool. At 10 a.m. that day, Cal State Hayward will play Brown. That match will be followed by a tussle between Hayward and the Stags at 12 noon. At 2 p.m. C-M will take on Brown to round out this unique pool "tripleheader".

"It ought to be some great water polo, and we hope to have a good turnout of fans," Remillard said.

Other top teams slated to meet the visitors and the Stags in the next couple weeks include Cal Poly and Long Beach State.

Remillard notes that anyone interested in attending the Sept. 18 extravaganza or any of the other matches slated can call the C-M athletic office at (714) 626-8511 for further details.

Valley prep coaches take look at teams

By MIKE BROSSART
PB Staff Writer

After two weeks of football practice, the valley's prep coaches are ready to take a look at their teams on the scrimmage field this weekend.

Coaches will be attempting to fill open positions and make final adjustments in their lineups in preparations for the opening of the high school grid season next week.

One exception may be Pomona High's Mike Clifton, who says he has his starting lineup pretty well set for the season opener but wants to use Saturday's scrimmage at Bonita to see what his reserves can do.

"If we can stay healthy this year we can beat anybody," observed Clifton Thursday. "Our front-line players are as good as anyone's. But our problem is going to be depth."

Clifton has just 12 lettermen and six starters back from last year's fourth-place San Antonio League team. At this time last year, he had 22 lettermen and 14 returning starters from the championship squad of 1974.

"We'll probably be using primarily our second and third stringers Saturday," said Clifton, "since we already know what our starters can do."

The Red Devils will scrimmage the Bearcats at 7 p.m., following a kickoff dinner from 4 to 6:30 p.m. at Bonita's stadium. Donations of $2.50 per person for the dinner will be used to support Bonita's athletic program.

The Pomona-Bonita matchup will be one of three matching two valley schools this weekend. The others will send Claremont to Chaffey, also Saturday at 7 p.m., and La Verne Lutheran to Ontario Christian Saturday at 9 a.m.

While all the SAL schools have scrimmages scheduled for Saturday, the valley's entries in the Hacienda League, besides Bonita, will see action tonight.

Alta Loma will host Duarte at Chaffey College at 6:30 p.m.; Walnut will visit Bassett and Ontario will meet Riverside Poly at UC Riverside, both at 7 p.m., and San Dimas will host Charter Oak at Bonita at 7:30 p.m.

American Christian traveled to Buckley High in Sherman Oaks for a 4 p.m. scrimmage today, while Calvary Baptist will host Bethel Baptist at John Galvin Park in Ontario tonight at 7.

An interesting scrimmage is set for Saturday at 4 p.m., when Chino's Jim Rawls takes his Cowboys to Rowland to meet brother Gary Rawls and his Raiders. The two brothers, who co-coached the East in the recent San Gabriel Valley All-Star Game, have never scrimmaged each other's team.

Other scrimmages involving teams Saturday will find Ganesha facing Northview at Covina District Stadium at 9 a.m., Bishop Amat at Upland at 10 a.m., Montclair at Kennedy of Barstow at 10:30 a.m., Garey against Riverside North at UC Riverside at 7 p.m. and La Puente at Damien at 7:30 p.m.

Cal Poly offers grid ticket plans

Football fans still have the chance to get in on plenty of action this season by purchasing season tickets for five Cal Poly home games at Kellogg Field.

However there isn't much time to act, since the Broncos open their season Saturday, hosting Cal State Fullerton. All home contests are held Saturdays at 7:30 p.m.

San Francisco State will arrive next on Sept. 25, with the Broncos not having another home game until Oct. 23, with United States International University.

Arch-rival Cal Poly San Luis Obispo, bringing with it many of its own supporters, plays at Kellogg Field Nov. 13. The following week (Nov. 20) will close the season seeing the Broncos entertaining the University of Puget Sound.

Tickets for all or individual games may be acquired in several manners. A family season ticket will admit an entire family (no matter how large) to all five games for just one price of $25.

Other ticket rates for individuals buying on a per-game basis are: adults, $2.25; students (with ID), $1; and children, 75 cents.

To order tickets or for further information, write the Cal Poly Pomona Athletic Ticket Office at 3801 W. Temple Ave., Pomona, 91768, or telephone (714) 598-4611.

Sports briefs

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Basestealing whiz Lou Brock of St. Louis swiped second base in the fifth inning of the Cardinals' a game against the Montreal Expos Thursday night, extending his major league record for 50 or more thefts per season.

Brock's stolen base, giving him 50 for the year, represented the 12th consecutive season the 37-year-old speedster has reached that figure. The steal was the 859th of his career, 33 short of the modern career record set by Ty Cobb.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Six-time winner A.J. Foyt, defending champion Tom Bigelow and U.S. Auto Club division leader Johnny Parsons are among the entries for Saturday's Hoosier 100 dirt car race at the Indiana State Fairgrounds.

The 100-lap feature around the Fairgrounds' one-mile oval, the richest USAC race for Indy-type cars on dirt, is the third of four dirt races this season. The finale is scheduled Oct. 2 at Syracuse, N.Y.

Expected to battle the favorites is Jan Opperman, currently the hottest driver on the USAC midget car circuit, with four victories in his last five races.

UTICA, N.Y. (AP) — Kevin Isaac sparred three hard rounds, then predicted victory in his nationally televised fight Saturday against heavyweight contender Ron Lyle.

Isaac, expected to weigh about 209 pounds, looked grim and determined Thursday during his final workout.

By contrast, Lyle was loose and smiling as he closed his training camp. He said he was ready, but declined to predict an outcome for the 10-round bout.

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City Kings have discussed trading guard Nate Archibald to the New York Nets but no deal has yet been made, according to Joe Axelson, president and general manager of the National Basketball Association club.

"There have been lengthy discussions with the Nets. But nothing has been finalized," Axelson said Thursday.

CHICAGO (AP) — Minnie Minoso, 53-year-old first base coach of the Chicago White Sox, is being placed on the active list, the club announced Thursday.

Minoso probably will be used as a designated hitter during the White Sox home stand starting tonight with the California Angels. But he will be available for whatever duties Manager Paul Richards requests, officials said.

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Knicks of the National Basketball Association have purchased veteran forward Jim McMillian from the Buffalo Braves for an undisclosed amount of cash, it was learned Thursday night.

The Knicks were expected to make the deal official at a news conference today.

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Brenda Gamblin singled home the game's only run in the 18th inning Thursday night as the San Jose Sunbirds beat the Santa Ana Lionettes 1-0 in an International Women's Professional Softball Association semifinal playoff game.

The victory in the opener of the best-of-five game series went to Bonnie Johnson, a 25-game winnder during the regular season. She scattered seven hits and struck out 12.

Losing to Johnson in the 18-inning duel was Cathy Benedetto, winner of 38 games for Santa Ana. She allowed eight hits and fanned six.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Jeff Reddan scored 28 kills and Dodge Parker added 42 assists Thursday night as the San Diego Breakers won the International Volleyball Association championship over the Los Angeles Stars.

San Diego won by scores of 21-2, 12-3, 12-9, 12-6.

Parker was named the league's most valuable player.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Carlos Lopez and Butch Alberts drove in the tying and winning runs Thursday night as the Salt Lake Gulls took a 10-9 victory over the Hawaii Islanders to even the best-of-five Pacific Coast League baseball championship series at 1-1.

The contest was a pitcher's nightmare as the two teams combined for 30 hits.

BATTING—George Brett, Royals, laced five hits, including the game-winning single in the 10th inning to lead Kansas City over the California Angels 6-5.

PITCHING—Rick Wise, Red Sox, flirted with a perfect game for 6 1/3 innings and finished with a two-hitter as Boston beat the Detroit Tigers 5-0.

Watson gets act together

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Tom Watson had a very simple, straight-forward reason for his failure to win on the pro golf tour this year.

"I haven't played well enough to win a tournament," said the young man who collected three titles, including the British Open and the World Series of Golf, in 1975.

But now, after an opening, six-under-par 65 that gave him a share of the first-round lead Thursday in the $200,000 World Open, Watson is reconsidering.

"I'm not striking the ball as solidly as I'd like to. My game isn't as consistent as I like it to be. I'm kind of scrambly at times," the personable redhead said.

"But I'm getting the ball in the hole.

"Yes, I may be playing well enough to win now. I think I am."

And Bob E. Smith who, along with big George Burns, shared the 18-hole lead with Watson, felt the same way.

Those three led a fantastic assault on par on the famed old No. 2 course at the Pinehurst Country Club, one of the nation's toughest layouts. In all, 45 men broke par 71.

Jack Nicklaus wasn't among them. The defending champion and winner of $100,000 last week in the World Series of Golf, had to birdie two of his last three holes for a 72.

"If 72 is my worst round of the week, it won't hurt me at all," he said.

Gay Brewer and Forrest Fezler were one shot off the pace at 66. Jerry Pate, winner of the U.S. and Canadian Opens, Jerry McGee and Australian David Graham were at 67. The group at 68 was made up of Hale Irwin, Charles Coody, Gibby Gilbert, Joe Porter, Bobby Mitchell and Bobby Walzel. Masters champ Ray Floyd was at 69.

Cappelletti will start

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Cappelletti will replace Lawrence McCutcheon at fullback Sunday when Los Angeles opens its National Football League season in Atlanta, Rams Coach Chuck Knox said Thursday.

However, McCutcheon, the Rams' leading rusher for the past three seasons, will not go to the sidelines, but to halfback. Cappelletti and McCutcheon have run together in the Los Angeles backfield frequently during this preseason, and the duo gives the Rams a potent inside-outside threat.

Cappelletti, the 1923 Heisman Trophy winner at Penn State will actually be replacing halfback Jim Bertelsen in the backfield.

Angels buy Bird reject

ANAHEIM (AP) — The California Angels claimed reserve infielder Tim Nordbrook on waives from the Baltimore Orioles Thursday, a team spokesman said.

Nordbrook, 27, has been a utility reserve behind Orioles' shortstop Mark Belanger and second baseman Bobby Grich. He hit .227 in 27 games this season.

Foothill Beverage to play in tournament

Foothill Beverage's softball team will be the lone Pomona Valley representative as the SCMAF "C" Division Southern California slow-pitch tourney gets underway this weekend in Cerritos.

Foothill Beverage will open its quest for the SCMAF Southern California title Saturday at 12 noon at Cerritos' Park East field. If Foothill wins that outing, it would play again at 5 p.m. in the single elimination tourney.

Tourney finals are set for Sunday. Teams from as far away as San Diego and Oxnard will be competing.

Foothill Beverage will carry a 20-5 season record into Saturday's tourney opener. The Pomona team is managed by Ron Pritchett.

Screwdrivers are most useful when used correctly

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

A screwdriver is considered one of the basic hand tools, like a hammer or pliers. Theoretically, a quality screwdriver should last what is loosely called a lifetime. It rarely does, simply because most persons at one time or another use it as a substitute for some other tool.

Among the improper uses for a screwdriver are to unstick balky windows, pry up staples, stir paint, punch holes in metal, loosen can covers, chisel wood and dozens of other quickie purposes. Not to mention the damage that screwdriver tips suffer when the blades are inserted into screw slots that are too large or too small.

It is a mistake to have only a single screwdriver. Obviously, not even a professional can keep on hand even a small percentage of the hundreds of types, sizes and designs on the market. Yet even a home workshop should have at least three or four different kinds; preferably, five or six.

You need three so-called standard-tip screwdrivers; one for small screws, one for medium-sized and one for large. The tips should be straight and nearly parallel-sided. And, very important, the handle of each screwdriver should feel comfortable when you hold it in your hand. When the diameter of the handle is too small, it may feel as though you don't have a firm grip on it, which means it will be even more uncomfortable when driving and removing screws.

Besides the three standard-tip screwdrivers, you should own at least one Phillips model for use with Phillips screws, and one offset type for reaching into awkward locations. If you get a sixth, make it one of the stubby kinds that have short handles. Depending on the extent of your do-it-yourself activities, you can get other varieties and sizes as you need them. These include rachet offsets, spirals, push-pulls, bits for braces, drivers for electric drills and those that hold the tips inside the screw slots until the screws are started.

When a screwdriver tip is too small for the screw slot, it can damage the screw and often make it impossible to drive it all the way. When it is too large, it can mean a damaged work surface or an injured hand or both.

To use a screwdriver properly, hold the handle in the palm of your right hand (assuming you are right-handed) with the thumb and forefinger near the ferrule. Steady the blade with your left hand and turn with the right until the screw has taken hold. When it has — and you are sure the screw is going in straight — remove your left hand and continue the operation.

Before driving a screw into wood, especially if it is hardwood, make a small starting hole with an awl. With hardwood, the possibility of splitting the wood can be eliminated if you first drill a hole about the diameter of the body of the screw and no longer than it. In the same place, drill a second hole slightly smaller than the diameter of the threaded part of the screw. The total depth of the two should be about the full length of the screw.

Many exciting styles of fences

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

There are many functional reasons for building fences other than the oldest of them all — to keep cattle, horses and other animals within certain boundaries.

No matter how utilitarian your reason, you can add to the appearance of your home and, consequently, its market value, if you choose a design from among the many exciting styles now available. Even the picket fence is becoming more stylized.

Whatever yur choice, even before you decide on whether you want a traditional or contemporary design, make sure what the zoning requirements and survey limits are. The most common limitation is the height to which the fence can be built along a property line. Sometimes, a potential problem can be averted by reaching an agreement with a neighbor on sharing the costs and work of building a so-called "good neighbor" design, one that looks the same from either side.

Since it is the fence posts that support the entire structure, their installation is of vital importance. Get them solidly in place and the chances are the fence will last indefinitely without the necessity of a repair. Generally, it is best to use one of the weather-resistant woods, such as redwood, cypress or cedar, although other types of wood will be satisfactory if they are treated with a preservative. "Treated" does not mean brushing the posts with a single coat of preservative. They should be soaked overnight in a container of the liquid. In fact, it's a good idea to do this with ANY kind of wood.

The posts should be 4 by 4s, each set one-third of its length underground. In digging the hole, make it about 8 inches in diameter at the top, slightly larger at the bottom. Make it from 4 to 6 inches deeper than the part of the wood that will go below ground. Fill that extra space with gravel to facilitate drainage. While many persons backfill the posts with well-tamped earth, a better job can be obtained by setting them into a concrete mix. It can be one of the pre-mixes or a mixture of your own made of one part portland cement, two parts of sand and four parts of gravel or other coarse aggregate.

When a post has been placed into several inches of concrete mix, brace it into position with two or three pieces of wood, set at an angle to hold it firmly. Then pour in more concrete mix until it fills the hole and comes to a point slightly higher than the surface of the ground. Trowel the mixture so that it slopes away from the post, permitting rain to flow away rather than settle next to the wood.

Keep the braces in place until the concrete has hardened. Wet down the mixture a couple of times a day for several days, skipping this step on a rainy day and increasing the treatments if the concrete is exposed to the sun for several hours a day.

Gate posts should be even stronger than the fence posts because they are subjected to constant strain. The gate itself should be at least 3 feet wide, with about a half-an-inch clearance between it and the latchpost.

In the installation of the posts, don't rely on your eyes to tell you when they are vertical. Use a level while you are setting the braces into position. Check constantly while pouring the concrete to be sure there hasn't been some movement.

HOLLY — Holly shrubs laden with bright red fruit provide welcome color in the fall and winter garden. The shiny leaves make attractive indoor decorations for the holiday season.

Show fall color with berries

There's no shortage of fall color available to the California landscape. Selected Liquidambers, Locust, Gingko and Chinese Pistache are but a few trees whose fall foliage add brilliant autumn hues to the skyline. Such shrubs as Heavenly Bamboo and Oregon Grape will soon be showing off their fall colors too.

Additional long-lasting color is provided by berried shrubs. The bright berries attract birds and create a holiday atmosphere. Branches laden with colorful fruit can be brought indoors to serve as festive decorations.

California's Toyon, Cotoneasters, Holly varieties and a myriad of Pyracantha forms, all produce a bounty of berries. Check with local nurseries for container plants already displaying their fall show of berries. Many of these shrubs do quite well in planters. Train them as small trees to add a decorative touch to porches and entry ways.

The Toyon (Heteromeles arbutifolia) features handsome, textured foliage. Grown as a shrub or small tree, Toyons make ideal selections for background plantings and screens at the far reaches of the garden. Provide Toyons with good drainage for the best results with these heat and drought resistant plants.

Grayleef Cotoneaster has plump reddish berries that adorn graceful branches of soft, appealing foliage. It blends into existing garden schemes but needs room in which to spread its beauty. The berries remain all winter.

For variety in berry color, size and quantity, Pyracantha is unequalled. Nurseries have Pyracanthas as shrubby specimens or on stakes and as trellis trained or espaliered subjects. There are also handsome ground cover varieties offered by your garden center.

Don't overlook the Holly varieties! In addition to their versatility in the landscape, they are the berries of Christmas tradition. Some varieties need pollinators — others do not. When making your selection check with your nurseryman for its pollination needs.

Feed soil first before planting

By Allan and Sheila Swenson
NEA Garden Columnists

To garden abundantly for those big yields you want from your vegetables, you must invest in your soil bank. In reality you must feed the soil before the soil can feed your plants.

Every crop you grow eats up some of the plant food in the soil. Unless you replace it, future crops just won't thrive. Fortunately, feeding the soil to feed plants better is easier than ever. New fertilizers have been developed to provide balanced plant food to get plants started well. Then, like those tiny time capsules for headaches, the new timed-release fertilizers become available gradually during the growing season. That way, your plants get a nourishing diet all season long, just when they need a boost most.

When you shop for fertilizer, remember the A B C's of gardening. In this case they are N P and K of plant food. When you read those numbers on a fertilizer bag — 5-10-5 or 18-2-6 — remember that the major nutrients for plants are Nitrogen (N), Phosphorous (P) and Potash or Potassium (K). They are always listed in the same order. The numbers refer to the number of parts of that nutrient in the total contents of the bag, box or package. The remaining amount is filler or carrier to provide proper dis-

Giving Chinese seeds a try

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

The huge greenhouse was filled with seedlings, but those with red tags were special. They came from the People's Republic of China.

Horticulturist Robert Hebb of the Cary Arboretum, in Millertown, N.Y., who tends thousands of plants from many parts of the world, was particularly pleased the day we visited. The seed of a Korean dogwood had just sprouted through the soil of its clay pot home where it had been settled 13 months earlier.

The seeds from China had come in two shipments, 82 species of trees, shrubs and vines in March 1975, and eight packets from Nanking in July 1974. The latter were the first sent to this country in 20 years.

Not much information came with the Chinese seeds in Cary's worldwide swap program with other arboreta, so they are grouped and given varying treatment of cold and warm, wet and dry conditions. "It's easy to fool Mother Nature with lights and temperatures," says Hebb.

Hebb, who came to Cary more than a year ago from Arnold Arboretum in Boston, also has a big cold cellar where hundreds of plants, ranging from large trees to little bushes, are held dormant, awaiting planting. And he is building a lath house to control sun and shade.

Of 110 varieties of seeds planted in the greenhouse, 90 had emerged. Some seeds require 30 to 40 years before their tough coats can be penetrated. To hasten the germinating process some shells are filed or knicked with a knife. A Chinese yellow wood was speeded up two to three years.

Cary, conceived by the New York Botanical Garden over four years ago, occupies 2,000 beautiful acres in Dutchess County, in the mid-Hudson region of New York State.

Its staff has written letters to all arboreta in this country offering them seedlings started from the seeds from China. These environmental centers trade freely among themselves.

Hebb said Cary gets 300 seed lists from all over the world, plus many specimens, mostly from the wild — which he prefers.

"We want to establish a seed bank — to freeze-dry seed, some stored at 30 degrees below zero for longevity," he related. "Cary has been able to increase seed storage life from a couple of years to 10-15 years in this way."

Cary now has 2,000 different varieties of plants but George Bookman, vice president and executive administrator, estimated it would take 20-30 years "to really look like an arboretum."

A grid system is being laid out to chart every plant. All areas will be marked as to the 11 soil types, hills and valleys. There will be an inventory also of all native trees and shrubs and a herbarium.

A horse and carriage will take the public on tours of what Bookman prefers to call the environmental agency. It also is an educational center.

Hebb is planning a collection of unusual plants, and a collection of stories about what each will do, such as the bush from Malaysia that protects ants which in turn protect the plant.

"Plants need dormancy as people need sleep," Hebb related. "We prolong the light period to keep the plants active. I'm hoping to install flashing lights that will save much energy." At Cary there is much simulation of natural programs through refrigeration, light, darkness and moisture.

Nearby were blooming huge New Guinea impatiens, potted specimens for indoors only except in tropical climates.

A rare maple from Japan came to Cary from the Rochester N.Y. park system. Perhaps the only linden of its kind in this country, obtained originally in China via a Jesuit botanist who sent one to France, came from a tree lover not far from Millerton. And Hebb sent to another arboetum several hackberry trees from China in the hope there would be an opposite sex to encourage a barren hackberry to flower.

The potted Chinese items included ash, linden, red bud, witch-hazels, wing nut, an elmrelated zelkova, rare maples, lace-bark pine, evergreens, sumac, a so-called silk tree with powder-puff-like flowers.

(A third shipment of plant seeds arrived from the People's Republic of China since the above column was written. It included 40 species of trees, shrubs and fines from Nanking Botanical Garden. It included several shrubs and trees that are Chinese counterparts to varieties native to New York State, including Chinese maple, chestnut, hackberry, honeylocust, spice bush, tulip tree, magnolia, oak, sumac and linden.)

Here's the answer

By ANDY LANG

Q. — I am completely confused by the news that lending institutions no longer have to supply home buyers with a statement of all the closing costs at least 12 days before the closing. I thought this law was designed to protect the buyer from being "surprised" at the closing by the many payments he had to make completely aside from the down payment. Why has this consumer-protection law been repealed?

A. — The law has not been repealed, merely amended. The effect is not as drastic as you seem to think. Under the original law, passed in 1974, the buyer had to get a detailed accounting of exactly what had to be paid at the closing. Under the amendment, the lender must give the buyer, at the time of the loan application, an estimate of what those charges will be. While it need not be as detailed as previously required, it must be reasonably close to the actual amount. Then, at least one day before the actual closing, the buyer must get a more precise calculation so that he can bring the necessary checks or cash to the meeting of all involved parties. In either case, this does not necessarily cut closing costs; it just prevents the buyer, as you put it, from being surprised. Under the 1974 law, before it was amended, there was much criticism on the grounds that the resulting red tape delayed home sales and, in some cases, added to the purchase prices. There are many exceptions and other ramifications to the amendment, so it is wise for any prospective home buyer to consult with his lawyer on whether any of them affect his particular purchase.

Q. — We have a utility room which is unusually large for a room of that type and we have decided to turn it into a den with tongue and groove flooring. The only trouble is that the floor in the room is made of concrete and we aren't sure whether we can use wooden flooring over it, since we have received conflicting opinions about this. Can you tell us whether this can be done and give us some idea of how?

A. — Yes, it can be done. The lumber yard where you purchase the flooring also handles the two other ingredients you will need — 2 by 4s and a waterproof mastic. Take the dimensions of the room to the dealer, who will tell you how many 2 by 4s you will need. The concrete is covered completely by the mastic. The 2 by 4s are laid immediately into the mastic. Then a staggered pattern with rows 12 inches apart, placed at right angles to the proposed direction of the finished flooring. Lay them flat side down, with the ends overlapping at least 4 inches. The tongue and groove strips are nailed into the 2 by 4s. There are some details connected with this entire operation which space will not permit outlining. Ask your dealer to give you an instruction sheet on this procedure put out by one of the manufacturers of hardwood floors. It will help, too, if the dealer can give you a rundown of everything that must be done. Laying a floor is not a do-it-yourself chore to take lightly, but it is assumed from your letter that you have had some experience at it, even if not in this particular method.

Q.—The cypress fence on the property of an old house we bought is in sound condition, but appears to be very dry. How can we perk up its appearance?

A.—Apply wood preservative to it. You can get the clear liquid or that with color in it, as you wish. The preservative will not only improve the fence's appearance, it will lengthen its life.

Plant food

Feed soil first . . .

Other minor elements may be needed in some areas. Local garden centers can guide you about this. But, knowing what the basic elements do is usually sufficient.

N, or Nitrogen is the key element for vegetative growth. It promotes strong and healthy leaves, stalks and stems. It is vital for all greenleaf tissue. Excess nitrogen may cause excessive foliage growth at the expense of fruiting and vegetable production. Corn and other fast growers need ample nitrogen.

P is Phosphorous. It is needed for strong flower formation, good fruit set and seed production. It also promotes development of plant sugars. If you want sweet-tasting crops, make sure enough phosphorous is in your tertilizer mixture.

K, the potash or potassium, build strong, healthy roots in proper amounts and hastens maturity of crops. It is vital for root crops like carrots and beets.

Leading fertilizer producers like Scotts, have developed special formulas for vegetables, different ones for flowers, trees and shrubs. By providing the key plant food elements in the most effective balance from these new fertilizers, you can be assured of getting the best results from everything you plant. Just as important, timed-release provides adequate feeding all season long. That saves time and assures plants of a balanced diet so they'll grow better to reward you abundantly.

Orchid group holds banquet

The annual banquet of the San Gabriel Valley Orchid Hobbyists will be held Thursday at the Altadena Town and Country Club, 2290 Country Club Drive, Altadena. The social hour will be at 6 p.m. and dinner at 7 p.m. Mail check for $6.25 to Mary Ann Johnson, 362 W. Woodruff Ave., Arcadia, by Saturday.

"More about Phalaenopsis" will be the topic of a talk with slides by John Miller, orchid hobbyist, at the banquet.

Feed grass before winter

Lawns are slowed down by the approach of colder weather and unles the gardener feeds them before this slowdown begins, he is apt to have a less than luxuriant lawn during winter months. September feeding greens up a lawn and helps to keep it that way. Even Bermuda lawns will resist the inevitable winter browning a bit longer when fed now, according to the California Association of Nurserymen.

Feed the roses in early Sept.

Feeding roses is advisable in the first half of September. During the latter half, you will probably want them to taper off for a winter rest. Of course, as the California Association of Nurserymen points out, there is no definite date to mark the point at which you stop feeding roses. It depends on the age of the bush and the area in which you live, to mention two factors involved.

Gardeners check list

Lift bloomed-out gladiolus when tops turn brown. Cut the stalks off about one inch above the corms and store the latter in a cool place. They should also be dusted before storing to avoid insect damage.

Bedding plants for winter bloom should be planted now. Stocks, violas, pansies, cinerarias, calendulas are five good choices.

September and October are good months to put in that new lawn. Prepare soil correctly and buy quality seed from your local nurseryman for the best results.

Peso devaluation hurts U.S. border businesses

SAN DIEGO (AP) - U.S. border businesses are reported being hurt badly, up to 90 per cent in Laredo, Tex., and 30 to 45 per cent south of San Diego, by devaluation of the Mexican peso.

An 80 per cent drop in spending by Mexicans was reported in Calexico in southeastern California.

The peso, freed Sept. 1 by the Mexican government in order to find its own level in international money markets, was trading Wednesday at 20.4 to the U.S. dollar. For years its parity was 12.5 to the dollar.

As the peso's value fell, buying shifted from American to Mexican border cities. Fifty businesses in Tijuana were closed by the government this week for raising prices or refusing to accept pesos and a total of 290 merchants were fined.

Ensenada, farther to the south, fined 90 stores.

"Business has plummeted in at least one San Ysidro grocery store," said Frank Garcia, an official of that U.S. border community's Chamber of Commerce.

Nicolas Lopez, owner of a San Ysidro grocery supply house, said he lost 30 per cent in wholesale sales to Mexican customers. His buyers normally come from as far as La Paz, 835 miles south in Baja California Sur.

Nogales, Ariz., reported a 70 per cent drop in sales to Mexicans.

In parking lots throughout the South Bay area from San Diego to the border, Garcia said normal traffic was down 30 to 35 per cent.

Lights hike animal park attendance

SAN PASQUAL (AP) - Showing off the animals by light at night is becoming a big hit, the San Diego Wild Animal Park says.

A record attendance of 345,000 was reported for this summer, when the park was opened at night for the first time in its four-year history. In August alone, there were 175,000 visitors.

The park near Escondido is an adjunct of the San Diego Zoo.

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. has signed bills authorizing seven new judgeships.

Brown's office has announced the signing of a measure by Asemblyman Robert Burke, R-Huntington Beach, htat increased the numbber of Orange County Superior Court judges from 33 to 37.

The Democratic governor also signed bills that increased the Superior Court judgeships of Marin and Ventura counties by one each.

A fourth bill gave the San Leandro-Hayward Judicial District one more Municipal Court judge.

San Diego County is also in line for two more Superior Court judgeships, J. Anthony Kline, the governor's legal affairs secretary, said in an interview.

Coal power

JOPLIN, Mo. (AP) — Missouri has energy to spare — about 10,000 years worth.

In 1975, 85 per cent of the state's electric power came from coal (compared to 45 per cent for the U.S. average) and by 1978 nearly 90 per cent of the state's energy will be produced from a slice of the 6-billion tons of recoverable reserves in the state that will take an estimated 10,000 years to deplete at current rates.

ROLLING STONE

Random Notes

BY BEN FONG-TORRES

BOB DYLAN has changed his mind about his appearance with the ROLLING THUNDER REVUE on NBC. The show will go on — Tuesday, late night — but Dylan has dropped the footage shot by the crew of "The Midnight Special" and replaced it with a videotape of a Colorado concert, done by TVTV, which first gained notice for its coverage of the Democratic Convention in Chicago in '68. One insider (not from TVTV) told us Dylan thought the Midnight crew's work "looked like every other Midnight Special." Dylan called TVTV and hired them to tape the May 23 concert at Hughes Stadium in Ft. Collins. It rained on the Rolling Thunder that day, and the result is "Hard Rain," a documentary with so many close-ups of the Revue that "you kind of feel you're right there on stage."

Dylan was apparently taken by the weather. For the first, and only, time on the tour, he sang "A Hard Rain's A-gonna Fall." He also performed a blistering "Idiot Wind" and sang "Blowin' in the Wind" with JOAN BAEZ. NBC executives reportedly "freaked out" when they saw the show, but, our source sez, they'll air it. "They're not about to turn down a Bob Dylan product."

* * *

ON THE OCCASION of our nation's 200th, DYLAN showed up in, of all places, Las Vegas. He was there to check out the brand-new, $10 million Aladdin Theater for the Performing Arts, a 7,500-seat structure free of high-priced maitre d's, glad-handing waiters and cigarette women. Dylan inspected the stage with PATRICK STANSFIELD, who stage-managed his 1974 U.S. tour, and stayed to watch Neil Diamond's concert. Dylan and Diamond, it turns out, are virtual neighbors in Malibu, where Diamond leases a house for summer use. They also share a friend: ROBBIE ROBERTSON of THE BAND, who produced Diamond's latest album.

* * *

DIAMOND OPENED UP the Aladdin in spectacular style, with a two-hour show that included three costume changes. But the whole stint — five concerts, tickets at $20 and $30 a head, and a fee for him of $650,000 — almost didn't happen. The night before he flew to Vegas, Diamond's Beverly Hills house was raided by 50 men from the police and sheriff's departments, armed with a search warrant for "narcotics" and backed up by a helicopter hovering over the house. At Malibu, a couple of weeks later, Diamond recalled it all:

"It was very surreal," he said. "They took the house apart, really. They went through all the rooms (there are 10) — they went through every box, went through personal photographs, and went through the grounds. It took about three hours."

Diamond said the police were looking for "hard drugs" and found less than an ounce of marijuana. So far, no charges have been filed against Diamond. "It's so embarrassing for them, they just wanted to drop it," he said. "God knows what they expected. But the drug thing is not my thing. They could have probably by accident picked any other house in Beverly Hills and found just about anything they were looking for, but I've just never been into that. Occasionally pot and that's about it."

Diamond's lawyers are looking into why the bust occurred. The incident left him "pretty shook" on the eve of his Vegas debut, he said, and it left his family "freaked out." In fact, he said, he's put the house up for sale. "At this point, MARCIA (his wife) just doesn't want to go back to the house."

OLIVIA NEWTON-JOHN has just finished her latest album, cut in Nashville, where she was seemingly a hate-object less than two years ago. That's when the Country Music Association, through membership balloting, named her Best Female Vocalist, causing a walkout by members who called her a foreigner intruding on Nashville-country soil. They formed their own mutual-admiration society.

Now, Olivia was back in Music City, USA, for the simplest of reasons: "I admire the musicians here," she told us at the Creative Workshop studios, "and I'd heard what a great atmosphere it was from people who've worked here."

She seemed unconcerned with the past. "Oh, no, that doesn't bother me . . . not any more," she said. "And it was so few people, and I talked to DOLLY (PARTON) about it, and she said that the press blew it out of all proportion anyway, and I was like the scapegoat." And, judging by the response of music people around town, Newton-John is right. "There was surprise," said one, "because of the stink." "But," said another, "everybody in town's fallen in love with her. People are excited about her being here, 'cause she's getting pop hits out of a country town."

Another scene-watcher noted, "Everybody's been trying to get songs to her. At first it was a swarm." And, among her session players (all local musicians) there is respect. "She's a professional," said the guitarist. "You can spot singers, and you can see how quick she adapts to a melody, how she just picks up a note and hits it, clean." In the studio, Olivia wrapped up 10 numbers quickly, took stabs at "The Wayward Wind," and even tried songs made popular by JANIS JOPLIN and ROD STEWART (specifically, "Piece of My Heart" and "I Don't Want to Talk About It"). But you know what? She didn't cut one country song.

Show business

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jackie Gleason is recharging his movie career, performing two films in a row.

The Florida-based comedian recently completed a movie. He now joins Burt Reynolds and Sally Field in Universal-Rastar's "Smokey and the Bandit."

Gleason, who won an Academy nomination for "The Hustler," will portray a Southern sheriff in "Smokey."

* * *

Former child evangelist Marjoe Gortner will play an innocent man trapped in narcotics traffic in the Mar Vista production, "Acapulco Gold."

Allan Bodoh and Bruce Cohn are producing the film on Hawaiian locations. Gortner recently played a drug dealer in "Viva Knievel."

Back to the West for Miss Kitty of "Gunsmoke."

Amanda Blake, whose career has been inactive since the end of the long-running series, returns for a role as a frontier madame in NBC's new series "The Quest," starring Kurt Russell and Tim Matheson.

GWTW sequel planned

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An author has been found to continue Margaret Mitchell's story of "Gone With the Wind."

She is Anne Edwards, who has been chosen by producers Richard D. Zanuck and David Brown to write the book on which the film sequel to "Gone With the Wind" will be based. Miss Edwards has been the author of the novels "The Survivors" and Haunted Summer" as well as biographies of Judy Garland and Vivien Leigh.

Ed Asner to play Sen. Long

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Edward Asner, news boss of "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" and Emmy winner for his role in "Rich Man, Poor Man," faces another challenging role. Sen. Huey Long of Louisiana.

Asner will play the TV title role in "Huey Long — The Late Great Populist," to be produced by Tomorrow Entertainment, maker of "The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman." Long was the colorful politician whose share-the-wealth proposals drew national attention.

STATELY PLEASURE DOME

It takes a heap o' money to make a house a home as singer Bob Dylan is discovering as he remodels this Malibu house. The project started as a $50,000 job, but the cost is now nearing $2 million. A county building inspector has termed the unusual structure "mishmash."

Chaffey seeking jazz players

The instrumental music department of Chaffey College has openings for musicians in the Jazz Ensemble. The program, directed by Jack Mason, opens Tuesday.

The two bands being formed this fall are part of a program that has gained recognition in the past three years throughout the Western states. Past performances have included college and university appearances in Las Vegas, San Francisco, Berkeley, Reno, San Diego, Flagstaff, Phoenix and Tucson. Appearances already scheduled for the 1976-77 school year will include Vancouver, Canada; San Francisco; Berkeley; Las Vegas; and San Diego.

Mason, instrumental music director, requests that those instrumentalists interested in taking part in this tuition-free class report to the college bandroom at 2 p.m. Tuesday. This includes saxophone, trumpet, trombone, drum, piano, guitar and bass players. High school students interested must be entering 11th grade this fall. Two units of credit are available to those who enroll.

In Malibu did Bob Dylan...

Remodeling costs zoom

MALIBU (AP) — Perched high above the stark cliffs of Malibu looms a sprawling wonder that, upon first reflection, looks like a Disneyland attraction that got lost on its way to Fantasyland.

But in a way, singer-songwriter Bob Dylan's nearly completed home is a Fantasyland — Dylan's.

The home — which looks part ranch house, part castle — was Dylan's dream. An army of artisans and craftsmen have been steadily at work trying to give the home a folksy, hand-crafted appearance and that they've certainly done.

The home, called "a terrible mishmash" by a Los Angeles County building inspector, was started several years ago, and the price tag is now nearing $2 million.

The place has "taken on several new directions," says architect Dave Towbin, who has been in on the project from its start. That's an architect's way of saying the house has been rebuilt more times than he can count.

"But I think the house hangs together pretty well for the form it is," Towbin says.

What form is that?

"It's kind of hard to put a label on it," says Towbin, "but I guess I'd call it stick-and-timber eclectic."

"I've only seen it from the outside," says columnist Jim Murray of the Los Angeles Times, who used to own a house where Dylan's now stands. "But I'd say it looks something like the Madonna Inn." The Madonna Inn is an all-pink hillside motel-restaurant, known for its mixture of architectural styles, in the central California town of San Luis Obispo.

Whatever Dylan's Malibu creation is, he can be sure there's nothing like it anywhere in the world.

Dylan was unavailable for comment.

The salient feature of the home is a huge onion-shaped dome protruding from the center section of the house, which gives one the impression "someone dropped a clump of ice cream on" the house, according to one neighbor.

"The dome originally was going to be an eagle's nest, you know, just a little hideaway," says Towbin. "Then it was going to be an observatory, then something else, and now it's an onion-shaped copper dome."

"It's kind of unreal," said one Malibu resident of his famous neighbor's new home, "But if he can stand it, I can."

In the back, Dylan has constructed a huge polymorphous pool, with plenty of room for his five kids and their friends. "It's a lake," one observer has noted.

The project started out to be a "$50,000 remodeling job of the Jim Murray house, says Towbin. "But then the thing began to grow and grow and grow, and a lot of things began to change. Sarah (Dylan's wife) got involved in the project, very involved, and then...

"Let's just say there were a lot of major changes, mainly because it had to feel right. It was very hard to arrive at a lot of things at that house, nothing in that house just happened.

Earhart story slated on TV

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When NBC airs "Amelia Earhart" next October, the three-hour TV movie about the most famous of America's female fliers will have a fairly famous female flier of modern vintage in the cast.

She's actress Susan Oliver, who a few years ago became a co-winner of the annual Powder Puff Derby race from coast to coast for female private pilots. She also has piloted a small plane across the Atlantic solo.

Miss Oliver, who until last June co-starred in the soap opera "Days of Our Lives" and has appeared in a variety of dramatic roles on TV, doesn't have the lead role in the NBC movie. Susan Clark does.

But she is playing Neta Snook, a female aviation pioneer who taught Amelia Earhart to fly and became a close friend in the process.

It's ironic that Miss Oliver, a small, soft-spoken woman with blonde hair and a gentle, humorous manner, is playing a flight instructor. An instructor's rating is about the only one she lacks as a pilot.

She says she has a glider pilot's license, a commercial pilot's license, multi-engine and instrument ratings and is qualified to fly co-pilot in twin-engine Lear jets. She has 850 flight hours logged, 80 in jets.

Oddly enough, the New York-born actress half-jokingly says she "had to be led kicking and screaming" to her first private plane ride, although she had flown as a passenger in airliners, of course.

The year of the Really Big Flight was 1964. A boyfriend who had recently gotten his private pilot's license, kept saying, "I'll take you up and show you the lights of Los Angeles at midnight," she recalled.

After about four months of this, she said with a laugh, she made out her will and went with her beau to Santa Monica Airport, where a single-engine Cessna 172 was waiting. They took off at night.

"It was one of those extraordinary clear nights," she said. "He kept saying, 'Isn't it beautiful,' and I kept saying, 'Oh, my God!' But then the concept, the idea of flight got to me. It was fascinating.

"So the next day, I drove over to the airport, plunked down my money, $650 or so — I still was too scared to take a demonstration ride — and eventually went on and got more ratings than my friend."

Miss Oliver, who in addition to acting and flying also is busy nowadays trying to start other careers as a writer and director, was asked how it feels to be zipping along flying her own plane.

"Well, much of it is relative," she said. "In a Boeing 747, you don't feel as if you're zipping along. In a putt-putt, if you're high enough, it's a lovely kind of ambling across the countryside."

Government pressure and gradual, if grudging acceptance of sexual equality in jobs, have made it possible for women now to at least get a shot at the previously males-only world of airline flying.

So we asked Susan Oliver, a determined woman, an experienced pilot, which she'd choose if she got a second go-around in life — acting or airlines?

"Interesting question," she said after a long pause. "I don't know. I was so tremendously shy as a child that I had a deep need to express myself. I suppose in acting I do that.

"But I don't know. All our lives would be changed if we were starting in different periods of time."

SPICE ON ICE — Karen Kresge, blonde San Franciscan, has returned to The Ice Follies after a year's sabbatical to get married. She has been with the show for seven years. The Shipstads & Johnson production runs through Sept. 19 at the Forum in Inglewood. Tickets are on sale at all agencies.

LOVELY LIZA — Liza Minnelli is one of the stars of KMPC's seventh annual "Show of the World," to be staged Oct. 2 at the Forum in Inglewood. Also on the card are Captain and Tennille, Foster Brooks, and Hamilton, Joe Frank and Reynolds. The production is a benefit for the Permanent Charities Committee of the Entertainment Industries.

Tony Bennett loves Reno

RENO, Nev. (AP) — And now sing along with Tony Bennett: "I left my heart in — Reno."

Reno?

Though Tony Bennett's trademark song is "I Left My Heart In San Francisco," he says his favorite city is actually Reno.

The erstwhile New Yorker, one of the most popular-male vocalists he'd rather play Harrah's in Reno.

It's not Carnegie Hall, nor the London Palladium — and he has played both — but Reno's people and the atmosphere make it the best for him.

"Reno attracts the biggest stars, even though it's small, because of the way they are treated here," said the singer.

He was 50 on Aug. 3. A lot of other singers don't make that age with all their hair and the same strong voice, but a lot of other singers aren't Tony Bennett.

He makes plenty of money, and isn't a bad-boy of entertainment — just a down-to-earth guy who likes to sing his kind of music and make people dream.

The style which was heard in 580 songs on 78 Columbia albums still comes through as mellow as ever.

During one evening show in Reno after his finale, he agreed to sing one more to quell a loud round of applause.

He didn't walk back to the piano to pick up his microphone, he just stayed in front and sang an unassisted version of "On the Sunny Side of the Street."

His voice carried easily and clearly to the rear. The only sound was Tony Bennett and the sighs from approving fans.

Why didn't he use a mike?

"At a small club with good acoustics, you can sing a few without a mike, and it's fun once in a while. I have a lot of respect for the old timers who did everything without the mikes and good sound gear," he said. "Besides that, I like to make sure I'm not losing my touch."

Bennett said he plans to continue to sing and continue testing himself — "You've got to keep stretching all the time."

He doesn't sing under the Columbia label anymore, he broke off and formed his own record company.

"Now I can sing what I want to sing, not what someone tells me to sing," he said. "My idea is to give the public what they want.

"I try to sing for everyone, for a general audience, and I try to do that by singing by instinct and singing good music — good music lasts forever."

Bennett has a house in Beverly Hills, Calif. and maintains an apartment in New York City.

During World War II he fought with the infantry in France. He married, became the father of four children and developed his style by watching some of the jazz greats on 52nd street in New York. He hit it big in 1951 with "Because of You."

Bennett says his favorite song is "Our Love Is Here To Stay."

TV shows are child's play

NEW YORK (AP) — He's a child's fantasy, Clarabelle the Clown, Tinker the Toymaker and Captain Kangaroo. He's a loving husband and father. An award winning producer. And for 21 years the star of a daily television show.

Bob Keeshan, most widely known as Captain Kangaroo, was watching the video tape previews of his 6,000th show.

Being seated in Keeshan's CBS office on West 57th Street, surrounded by artifacts of his shows, was a bit overwhelming for a reporter who was raised by the Captain and Howdy Doody.

Without his television makeup, Keeshan didn't exactly look like the Captain. But on the other hand, the eyes and smile and voice were so comfortably familiar.

"Well, I'm not always the Captain. In my private life, I'm not," he pauses, frowning slightly. "But the Captain's always me. He reflects my attitudes and philosphy."

Rumor-mongers have long said that Bob Keeshan is a rather nasty person off-camera and rather uncooperative in public.

"Out of make-up, I just won't play the Captain," comes the almost angry reply.

"Sometimes in a restaurant, you'll find someone who wants to be the neighborhood hero. 'Look there's Captain Kangaroo.'

"So what has he done?

"A child who enjoys the show will be disillusioned. The child knows that isn't the way the Captain looks, and so we've destroyed another illusion."

Perhaps he's tired of playing to a knee-level audience?

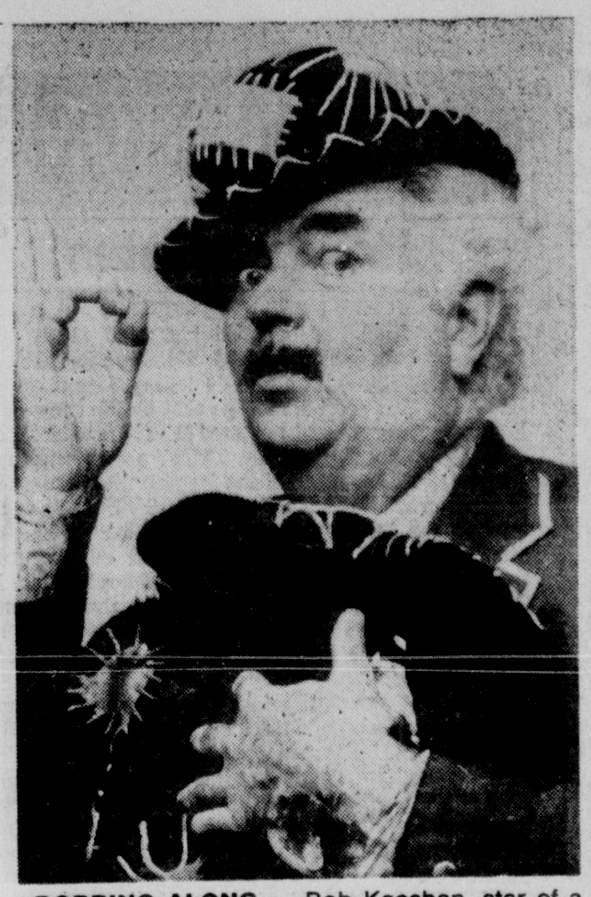

"If I wanted to do something else I would," is the instant reply.

When the show began in 1955, Keeshan was 27 years old. Why did he decide to do a grandfather character instead of a younger man?

"Well, I thought it was much easier to relate to young people," he said. "To use a grandparent relationship with a lot of love and warmth, and not a parent with all the responsibility and authority."

Not happy with much of what passes as children's shows, Keeshan feels parents could do more about that.

"The only major changes will come when a large number of parents get concerned," he says. "Parents are effective at the bottom line, the TV set, and too many are still using it as a babysitter."

BOBBING ALONG — Bob Keeshan, star of a television show for 21 years, gives the okay sign in a New York studio as he approached his 6,000th show. He has also appeared as Clarabelle the Clown and Tinker the Toymaker.

GARTH "WOODY" ELLWOOD

They just kept bringing food to me when I visited Atlantic Fish & Chips for lunch this week!

I had noticed Ernie and Bernice Goh seemed to be getting good response from their $1.59 Fish & Chip dinner coupon, so I decided to drop in for lunch Tuesday, coupon and money in hand, just like a regular customer.

The fish was quite tasty and was a just-right portion for me at lunchtime. However Bernice, knowing I like shrimp, insisted on fixing me some, just to "sample." Ditto Ernie and his oysters. (I didn't even realize they had them on the menu.) I'm not big on oysters (do you have to acquire a taste for them?), but the shrimp and Bernice's own homemade sauce was delicious.

I was surprised to learn that Atlantic Fish & Chips hasn't been discovered by the lunch crowd along Foothill. Ernie says his dinner business (mostly take-out) is very good, and I would think he'd get more action than he does at lunchtime.

In case you're interested in trying Atlantic, it's located in the Stater Bros. Shopping Center at the corner of Foothill and Towne in Claremont.

I guess everyone loves a parade, and you just might like the show put on by the colorful "Parade" at the Beef 'n Barrel in Claremont.

Under the creative direction of pianist Dale Pearson, "Parade" musically relies upon a wide variety of material ranging from the latest in Top 40 to yesterday's standards, a clean, crisp sound and excellent arrangements. The infectious musical interpretations of vocalist Ann Bridge coupled with her enticingly charming personality makes her a captivating performer. "Parade" has wowed California audiences at the Ramada Inn in Beverly Hills and the Sheraton in San Diego. Catch 'em if you have a chance. Their show appeals to young and old alike. You'll find them in the Loading Dock at the 'Barrel, 840 S. Indian Hill, Claremont.

I can't really recall of a single time I've been disappointed in the food at Mr. Steak in Upland. The restaurant is located rather handily for me and since my son, Wondering Willie, has never been known to refuse a steak dinner, we find ourselves going there occasionally.

Manager Jim McNamara's Mix & Match Kebobs promotion seems to be adding variety to the menu there (and diners to Mr. Steak.) The place was full when we visited and I noticed the Kebobs were the choice of many customers there.

Mrs. Steak is located just above Foothill on Mountain Ave. in Upland.

NEWS 'N NOTES

. . . A long-time favorite restaurant of mine has reopened in the Valley. O'Reilly's Buffetburger, at the corner (almost) of Mountain and Holt in Ontario, has reopened under new management. Cheerful Bob Ford, an original O'Reillyman, is manager of the place now. I dropped in the other day to sample the chocolate pie and found that it still smacks of the skills of Ruby Parisian, O'Reilly's pie-baker extraordinaire for the past 13 years.

. . . New group called "Cancerians" debuted last Monday night at Elli's Forum in Montclair. The group, all born under the astrological sign of Cancer, includes two performers who used to play with "The Four Guys" at Elli's a few years back, Al Lopez and Lewie Hughes. Lead guitarist for the group is Mark Carter, Hughes' partner in the duo "Cameo" at Lady Jols in Rowland Heights. Les Milton, friend of Lewie's for many years, manhandles the drums in the same fashion he has with "Something New at Younger Bros. Maintaining their other group commitments while trying to "get something good together," the "Cancerians" will play each Monday and Tuesday evening at the Montclair nitery.

The Supremes

Trio still singing along

By Associated Press

The Supremes, those three pretty, young, vivacious black girls from Detroit who first turned the world on to the Motown Sound, are still singing, still putting out records.

Mary Wilson, who looked out bright-eyed from a 1960 press picture of the group, is still in it, prettier than she was then. The other two now are Cherrie Payne, born in Detroit, younger sister of singer Freda Payne, and Susaye Greene, born in Houston, who joined early this year, from touring with Stevie Wonder. She's so new she's only on three tracks of the newest Motown LP, "High Energy."

The Supremes have had their ups and downs, Miss Wilson says, but she's confident now that they're on an upward trail. Motown, its main attention seemingly turned away from recordings to movies lately, "has not been pushing us," Miss Wilson says. "We have been told that they are definitely behind us now and will be pushing.

"We had songs from the last album, 'He's My Man,' that they released and didn't push. We've been touring more abroad lately than home; we didn't have any product out here. Our crowds have been dropping off. They want to hear songs they've been dancing to every day.

"We should be putting out two or three albums a year; recently it has been like one." But Miss Wilson says about the present group, "Once we start jelling, it is going to be very good." And she likes the new album. "It is one of our best and I'm not saying that because it is our most recent."

This one is produced by Holland Dozier Holland Productions Inc. and that's a reunion. Producer Bryan Holland, composer Lamont Dozier and lyricist Eddie Holland were behind the Supremes' early hits.

"They produced 11 of our million sellers," Miss Wilson says. "We had some more million sellers; I can't remember how many. I wish we could have that problem now.

"When Holland Dozier Holland left Motown, we had a very hard time, believe me. It's like having a tailor who can make clothes to fit you and then having to go to someone else. It's not quite the fit."

STILL SUPREME — The Supremes, popular Mo-town trio, is still singing and recording after 17 years. Mary Wilson, right, is the only member of the original group (it started as a quartet). New are Cherrie Payne, left, and Susaye Greene. "High Energy" is their latest album.

But, the sound isn't exactly the same as it was a dozen years ago. "It's more soulful, I think," Miss Wilson says. "I can't say it's more rhythmic; all our things were. It's more up to date and mature."

In the beginning, there were nine Supremes that didn't hit; then "Where Did Our Love Go?" did hit — straight to No. 1 best seller in the country, in 1964. It was followed by four more straight No. 1 singles from the Supremes, two that year, two the next, "Baby Love," "Come See about Me," "Stop! In the Name of Love" and "Back in my Arms Again."

Before that, there were four Supremes, from 1959 through 1961, but Betty Ingrim left to get married and so did Barbara Martin, who replaced her, so Mary Wilson, Diana Ross and Florence Ballard decided a fourth was bad luck and they'd just be a threesome.

They were from poor families in Detroit, Mary an only child, Diana one of six, Florence one of 12. They each received a check for $100,000 for their singing during 1964 and each bought a $35,000 home for her family on the same street in Detroit. In August 1965 astronauts Cooper and Conrad from their capsule in space requested "Where Did Our Love Go" from Gemini control.

Motown took care of everything and Miss Wilson remembers that as being okay with her. She only wanted to sing and party. However, she was glad when, after eight years, Motown quit sending a chaperone along to keep her eyes on the Supremes.

"I wouldn't say I'm the leader now," Miss Wilson says. "I take a lot of first steps. My husband's the manager.

"I'm not a leader type. I'm more of a follower, really. I was put in a position where I had to make certain decisions but personality-wise it's not my character. As soon as everything gets cool, I won't be doing nothing but having fun. I never liked to carry a big load like the load I've been carrying lately, but I wanted to keep the group alive. I'd rather be grooving."

Last year Florence Ballard visited Miss Wilson, her husband and baby daughter Turkessa in Los Angeles. "She wanted to get back into show business. She thought about getting back into the Supremes and it wasn't to be. There was too much between her and the company.

"She was an independent kind of person. When she wanted to sing she would sing. When she wanted to sleep she would sleep. That's one reason she was out of the group.

"She came out on stage with us on the Coast last year. The fans went wild. Everyone loved her. And she could always sing."

Motown replaced Miss Ballard in 1967 with Cindy Birdsong, formerly of Patti LaBelle and the Bluebelles. Miss Ballard later brought suit against the company. A judge threw out the suit. Miss Ballard married, had three daughters, and was separated and in dire financial circumstances when she died in a Detroit hospital early this year, at 32.

In 1970, Diana Ross left the group and was replaced by Jean Terrell, sister of boxer Ernie Terrell. Miss Ross has had great success as the star of movies "Lady Sings the Blues" and "Mahogany." She also has three daughters and on the day after her opening a one-woman show in a Broadway theater this year her press representative announced that she and her husband had separated.

Cindy Birdsong left to have a baby in 1972, replaced by Lynda Laurence, who had been touring with Stevie Wonder. Then in 1973, both Lynda Laurence and Jean Terrell left, to get married.

"When Lamont Dozier called me, there was no one in the group but me," Miss Wilson says. "He told me he had a friend, Cherrie Payne, who sang. He didn't tell me it was his girlfriend at that time. So she came in. That's the only time a lot of girls were auditioned — but none of them were chosen because Cindy Birdsong came back.

Then she left again this year and Susaye Greene joined.

Mary Wilson has stayed with it all these years, she says, "because I love it. I love the good times and the bad times. I figure you're going to have some of those anyway.

"And all the girls we've had have been fantastic."

Chorale to start practice

The Pomona Valley Chorale (formerly the Pomona Community Chorus) will hold its first rehearsal of the season in Room M-1 of Garey High School at 7 p.m. Monday.

Ray Woods, director, will hold auditions for new members at 6:30 p.m.

The chorale will prepare a program for its third consecutive appearance at the Los Angeles County Fair Sept. 26 and for the annual Christmas concert Dec. 18. The Christmas program will feature portions of Handel's "Messiah."

Also scheduled for the year are the Pomona Choral Festival March 26 and the Spring Pops Concert May 7. The chorale's repertoire includes classical, light classical and popular music.

Woods founded the chorus five years ago. He is music instructor at Garey High School and organist and choir director at the First Presbyterian Church of San Pedro.

Accompanist is Gary Toops, music instructor at Mt. San Antonio College and choir director of the Anaheim United Methodist Church.

'Irene' set at S. B'no

Jane Powell and Patsy Kelly, veteran stars of stage and movies, will perform in the musical hit, "Irene," at the California Theater of Performing Arts, San Bernardino, Nov. 12-20.

The show opens the 30th season of the San Bernardino Civic Light Opera. Tickets are on sale at the Ontario Chamber of Commerce.

"Irene" will be followed by the award-winning musical comedy, "Gypsy," which will be presented Feb. 18 through 26, and Sigmund Romberg's American musical classic, "The Desert Song," May 6 through May 14. Stars for the latter two musicals will be announced at a later date.

"Irene" contains a special kind of charm, made up of equal parts of high humor, vivacity, romance, and nostalgia, according to Dale Jenks, CLO manager. "And as a special attraction," he said, it contains some of the best-loved, most singable numbers in the history of the American musical theater, including such hits as 'Alice Blue Gown,' 'I'm Always Chasing Rainbows,' 'You Made Me Love You' and 'They Go Wild, Simply Wild Over Me'."

Season tickets for all three musicals can be purchased at the Civic Light Opera box office, 2079 N.E St., San Bernardino, phone 882-2545.

The Nashville Sound

C-W singers brews up a hit

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Johnny Duncan had just sung his hit "stranger" on the Grand Ole Opry and was walking backstage when a stagehand stopped him.

"That's the best thing I've heard in a long time," he said.

Duncan flashed his best Texas grin because the song was recorded under unusual circumstances.

He was set to record when his producer, Billy Sherriff, told him to kill a couple of hours. Duncan ended up at a bar, ordering dark beer on tap. Quite a few.

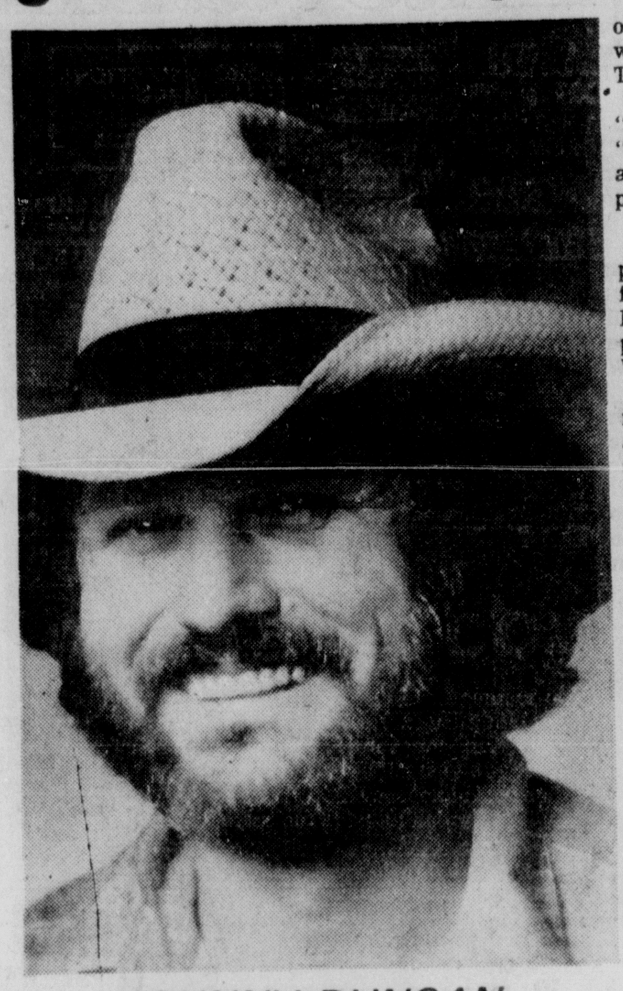

"I got more than relaxed," he recalled, understating his condition. "I didn't intend to get wiped out. I got back to the studio and Billy asked me if I was ready. I said, 'Let 'er go.'"

The result was a song that may contend for a Country Music Association award. The song, written by Kris Kristofferson and recorded previously on albums by both Kristofferson and Billy Swan, leads off Duncan's current album, "The Best of Johnny Duncan," which is nearing the top of the charts.

Asked how the beer affected his singing, he said sheepishly, "I'll have to say it was the first time I had a No. 1 record."

He was recording again last week and used a similar pattern. He drank two beers during a luncheon interview at the same bar and bought a six pack on the way to the studio.

He planned to record three or four songs, then pick one for his next release. He expects the single to be scrutinized because of "Stranger."

JOHNNY DUNCAN

"Once you set a standard, every DJ is going to expect good or better," he said.

Music and beer are not his only loves. He's also fascinated by astrology.

"I believe that qualities that astrology says a person will have will come out if you study people," he said.

"I'm a Libran. Most of us are easy-going, diplomatic. Sagittarians are sweet people; Geminis are the most intellectual.

"My astrological number is six and Friday is my lucky day. But I'm not a fanatic about it."

Duncan, 37, got a recording contract nine years ago when he was singing on a Nashville television station and a Columbia Records executive happened to be watching and signed him immediately.

"It was the biggest day of my life," said Duncan, who now lives in Granbury, Tex.

His releases include "Charley Is My Name," "Sweet Country Woman" and "Jo and the Cowboy," plus three albums.

His looks and low-key profile resemble Kristofferson. He sounds like Jim Reeves and at 6-foot-4, 215 pounds he has a John Wayne physique.

"In the future I want to record more hit records and become a better songwriter," he said. "We're responsible for our own destiny; if we get off our tails and work hard, we make our own luck."

Kennedy set for 'Airport'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "He's our single link between the three movies," producer William Frye explains about the casting of George Kennedy in "Airport 1977."

Kennedy will take time out from his "Blue Knight" television series to reprise his role as Joe Patroni, the super Mr. Fix-it of the air world. In "Airport" he was the airfield boss who cleared a runway during a blizzard. "Airport 1975" had him promoted to airline executive and he helped rescue a damaged 747.

Kennedy-Patroni will again help rescue a 747, this one a private jet that disappears in the Bermuda Triangle.

Marilyn Monroe still a star

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Despite an apparent boom of interest in the late Hollywood sex symbol Marilyn Monroe, many publicists say her present-day fans are merely a small, but vocal minority.

Fourteen years have passed since the puzzling suicide of the Hollywood movie queen, but songs still are written of her rise to stardom and fans still seek out her secluded crypt.

Marilyn died Aug. 5, 1962 from an overdose of sleeping pills. The 36-year-old Hollywood success had been a mystery in life. She became an even greater mystery in death.

Scott Jones, a director of secluded Westwood Memorial Park in Los Angeles, where the actress is entombed, says some 50 tourists and fans visit Marilyn's crypt each week and gather there by the hundreds on each anniversary of her death.

"I think her popularity has been increasing over the years," said Jones. "It seems like more and more people are asking about her and come here to talk about her life. I'd guess it's nostalgia."

But some television publicists say her fans are comparatively few, making up for their numbers in their militant support of the actress' movie reruns and memorabilia.

"I don't think there is tremendous public interest today in Marilyn Monroe," said one ABC television publicist who asked that he not be identified. "It's just that her supporters are so visible.

"The Monroe thing seems to be part of a cycle. There was a time that any Doris Day or Elizabeth Taylor movie you aired would send ratings through the roof. But not anymore. I think it's the same way with Marilyn. I'm afraid she has become passe."

A Los Angeles television station which last May aired a solid week of daily Monroe movies reported that "fairly good-sized" audiences watched the shows, but the success was considered insignificant.

Other television publicists reported only marginal public demand for Monroe films.

Gossip columnist and publisher Rona Barrett agreed that there has been no visible increase in the ranks of Monroe fans.

"I don't think there has been a return of popularity for Monroe," she said in a telephone interview. "I felt there was a resurgence of popularity for Marilyn about two years ago, but it lasted only about 18 months. No increased popularity has been reflected in my mail."

The resurgence of Monroe's popularity, the publicists said, seemed to begin with published reports claiming the actress had maintained an affair with the late President John F. Kennedy.

Interest increased when a flurry of books on the movie queen were published, including Norman Mailer's book, "Marilyn."

Rock music star Elton John added to interest in the dead actress with release of "Candle in the Wind," a song about Marilyn's life.

The publicists said they have heard of existing Marilyn Monroe fan clubs, but details are lacking on where they are located or how many members they have.

Universal to film 'Capri'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Erica Jong, author of "Fear of Flying," and Jon Fast, son of author Howard Fast, has sold Universal Pictures a "bold ontemporary love story" titled "Capri."

The original screenplay will be filmed abroad with four principal actors.

Quilt & square dance week

In conjunction with the Pomona and Montclair Bi-Centennial Quilt Committee, Montclair Plaza will be hosting a fascinating display of "Quilts of Yesteryear" on October 8, 9, and 10. A special quilt will be displayed that consists of 63 picture block squares. These 9½ inch squares will represent the history of Pomona Valley and the surrounding cities.

As an added attraction, square dancing groups will perform October 4 through the 10, and Montclair Plaza is inviting all area square dance groups to participate in each evening's activities. Call 626-2441 to reserve a time for your group. The square dancers will be accompanied by Otis Roy, the yodeling custodian from Pomona.

Come and join in the festivities as Montclair Plaza celebrates our ancestor's recreation and entertainment with quilting, yodeling, and square dancing.

DEPRESSION GLASS SHOW AT MONTCLAIR PLAZA

The Montclair Depression Glass Society will hold their annual show at Montclair Plaza Saturday September 11 through Sunday September 12. The Depression Glass Society will be featuring glass from the depression era of the 1930's.

The objective of the club is to encourage and promote collecting, to stimulate the interest of others in the subject of depression glass and to acquire and dispense knowledge on the subject of collecting depression glass.

There will be an expert in the repair and advise on how antique and collectable glass can be repaired during the show hours.

Meetings are held the second Tuesday of the month in the New England room of the Imperial Savings and Loan Building, 400 North Indian Hill Blvd. in Claremont, California at 7:30 in the evening. Persons interested in depression and collectable glass are invited to attend.

You get a $25 Bonus Certificate. Free!
With any purchase of $100 or more.

Good in our Tall or Big departments, too.

MONTCLAIR PLAZA, MONTCLAIR

A good travel agent

LINDA PARISH was recently awarded Ms. TravelAge West. She is presently district manager for On the Go Travel at Montclair Plaza

The more complicated a client's travel planning gets, the more she enjoys it. It's more of a challenge, explains Linda Parish, On the Go Travel, Montclair, Calif. Linda always wanted to get into travel and began working for American Airlines in 1960. She then decided to try agency work in New Jersey. From there Linda and her husband Mike and son Shane migrated to Australia for two years where she worked for Trans Australian Airlines. She loved Australia and "the warm and outgoing people."

After a brief move back to the east coast, they decided to try California where Linda was hired by On the Go six years ago. She started out part-time, worked into full time and three years ago became manager. About one year ago she was also appointed supervisor for five offices. Linda also has the distinction of having the longest length of service with the company. She's a firm believer in her office motto that the client is always right. In her travels, Linda has only missed two U.S. states — Alaska and Maine. She's traveled through most of Europe, the South Pacific, Mexico, Hawaii and the Orient. Her favorite places are Machu Picchu, Portugal and the fjords of Slam, Norway. Linda loves to cook and collect recipes during her travels. Rings are another favorite shopping item. Linda and her husband just bought a new home, so they are busy putting in the yard. But, in the office you'll find her happiest working out those involved trips. One of her favorite bookings, she reveals, was to Outer Mongolia.

GOOD SKATE

During a recent Muscular Dystrophy Skate-A-Thon held at the Holiday Roller Rink in Montclair, one of Montclair Plaza security guards, Al Dobrick, better known as Dobbie, skated for 10 hours and 45 minutes and collected $113 for Muscular Dystrophy.

SHOP SAT. NIGHT Sept. 11 to 10 pm

PAULINE Comanor, known as the world's fastest cartoonist, is coming to Montclair Plaza with her famous "Cartoon In", a unique entertainment experience that has amused, amazed, dazzled and delighted audiences from coast to coast.

World's fastest cartoonist

Ms. Comanor's title, which she earned over the years through innumerable professional performances, is based on her ability to turn out huge and highly 'polished' humorous cartoon sketches while rhythmically linking her free hand, flash action technique to musical accompaniment. In the "CARTOON IN", she has brought this together with her renowned ability to capture instant resemblances which always bring out the best in the subject.

Volunteer to be drawn in to one of the many zaney situations that take shape on Ms. Comanor's easels. After you do, you will end up taking the entire scene, yourself and all included, home. Chances are this valuable supersize full color manifestation of the real you will become a permanent part of your home or office decorating scheme, and a permanent conversation piece as well.

Then again, there is always a chance you will be awarded Ms. Comanor's surprise creations just by being the first to correctly guess what it is going to be or the best reason for wanting it.

Whether you come to watch or participate, you will find the "CARTOON IN" a wonderfully enjoyable experience, no matter how old you are or you think you are. No two performances are exactly alike, so you can keep coming back and never know what cartoon capers to expect.

You will also want to bring along a pencil and pad, because there is a cartooning and doodling workshop scheduled for Saturday, the 25th of September. Ms. Comanor has provided countless people with instruction on how to turn simple, every day lines, (They don't have to be straight lines), into all manner of amusing and artistically valid creations.

Pauline Comanor began her versatile career in her home town of Philadelphia where, while still in her teens, she was discovered by a Paramount animation studio's executive doing exhibition cartooning in a local department store. In short order, she had not only become the youngest artist at the studio, working on such cartoons as "Popeye" and "Betty Boop", but was sent out as it's nation wide theatrical representative.

Her work later expanded into television, after first appearing for the DuMont Network in New York, she went on to write, produce and perform in her own TV shows in Florida and Philadelphia.

Her talents have since gained renown throughout the country in numerous TV and personal appearances. She has been a featured guest on such programs as Mike Douglas and San Francisco AM.

THIS early morning view of the Montclair Plaza exposes the 137 acres that the Plaza encompasses. The parking lot has the capacity to park 6,000 cars at a time. The outside perimeter of the Mall includes six acres of trees, shrubs, and ground cover. The Montclair Plaza provides jobs for over 2,000 people.

Marsha Holland in charge of these smiling faces

Citizens Savings and Loan at 5102 Montclair Plaza Mall in Montclair has been opening up many new accounts the past few months. One of the reasons for this increased activity is Branch Vice President Marsha Holland and her hard working staff.

Ms. Holland has been with Citizens for over three years, having been transferred to the Montclair branch in June. Since joining Citizens, she has been trained in all aspects of branch operations.

Being new to the community, Ms. Holland is also a new member of the Montclair Chamber of Commerce. In her branch and through Citizens, she hopes to get acquainted with the people who live and work in the area. Branch promotions, such as the Bicentennial Salute held in June, a food faire and a possible rose show in October, should provide a good time for everyone to get acquainted.

Ms. Holland attended California High School and Rio Hondo Jr. College. Overall, Ms. Holland has an extensive background in the financial field.

Ms. Holland and her staff hope you'll stop by their branch to have a cup of coffee and say hello.

Citizens Savings and Loan is open Monday through Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. and on Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.

Reaching Boston on May 25, 1775, the British frigate "Cerberus" was immortalized in the anonymous lampoon posted around the town: "Behold the Cerberus, the Atlantic plough, her precious cargo, Burgoyne, Clinton, Howe. Bow, wow, wow!" The three men were members of Parliament in addition to being military officers. The World Almanac recalls that Cerberus was the dog in Greek mythology that guarded the gates of Hell.
